Changing Situation Across Ocean Forces Uncle Sam To Revise Defense Plans

Obsolete Airplanes May Be Replaced By Committee

EXPERTS CALLED

Complete Change In Battleship Urged By Edison

WASHINGTON, May 3 — Grim lessons of Europe's war today altered virtually the entire defense program of the United States for the coming year.

Uncle Sam squared away to build better battleships and airplanes—for the simple reason that latest data from the European arena showed that what he isn't good enough to meet the test of modern warfare.

Consequently, senate committees handling army and navy supply bills called on experts to re-shape their plans to the pattern of necessity.

First, Sen. Lodge (R) Mass., held the army air corps chief, Brig. Gen. H. H. Arnold, in Washington despite his Panama Canal trip plans, to tell the senate appropriations committee whether the air corps shouldn't "black out" the 2,700 airplanes the service now can put "on the line."

Design Experts Called

Second, Senate Naval Affairs Committee Chairman Walsh (D) Mass., summoned navy design experts to appear before his committee and tell just how the battleship of the future must be built to withstand the terrific power of aerial bombs.

Arnold already has informed the appropriations committee that the air corps planes now in service are obsolete. He told committeemen these ships couldn't stand up in combat against the planes of Nazi Germany.

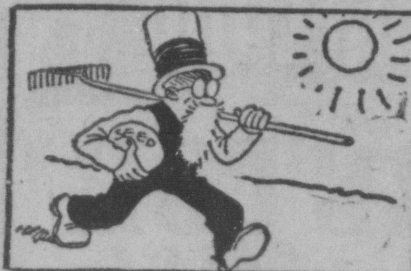

Secretary of the Navy Edison, in turn, put congress on notice that only a complete re-designing of the battleship and other fighting seacraft can afford adequate protection against bombs.

The navy problem apparently will be easy to solve, the only question being one of money. There appeared to be ample support for furnishing the admirals all the funds they deem necessary to build a sea force that could withstand the onslaught of a modern air armada.

In the field of air fighting, complications arose. The pending army supply bill provides funds for approximately 1,900 new combat airplanes by July 1, 1941. Arnold told the senate appropriations committee that America's production maximum between now and that date was about 6,000 planes. Lodge then inquired whether, in view of Arnold's statement that the planes now possessed by the army were obsolete, all of the production money should not be employed to furnish the air corps with modern planes.

If such a suggestion were carried out, the entire program of plane-production for foreign nations now under way would have to be postponed for 12 months.

Americans Say British Plane Bombed Steamer

NEW YORK, May 3—A charge that a British bombing plane machine-gunned the American freighter Flying Fish as it lay at anchor in the harbor of Bergen, Norway, was made today by sailors aboard the American craft as the ship nosed its way through a fog into New York harbor.

However, the master of the ship was vague about the origin of the machine gun bullets in the Flying Fish's bulkheads, saying:

"They probably came from a plane that flew overhead."

And again, the captain added the inconclusive observation:

SKILLFUL WORK OF PILOT SAVES NINE ON PLANE

EDMONTON, Alta., May 3—How skillful handling of a heavily loaded transport plane saved nine persons from possible injury or death was revealed today as air-men lauded Pilot Ted Field for one of the greatest feats in the history of northern aviation.

About to land at Edmonton airport late yesterday after flying in from the Yukon with six passengers and a crew of three, Field discovered the wing flaps of his big plane were jammed. As he tried to work them free one of the flaps broke loose and it was all the pilot could do to pull his ship up from a too-quick descent.

Field zoomed up and for an hour circled the airport while his mechanics daintily leaned out and attempted to repair the flaps. Two women among the passengers knelt in prayer.

Finally, with his gasoline supply almost exhausted, Field radioed the airport that he was going to have to attempt a landing, and ordered fire apparatus and ambulances to stand by.

Carefully side-slipping and using rudder control, Field sped earthward, his speed unchecked by the now-useless wing flaps. As airport attaches stood breathlessly by, Field executed an almost-perfect 3-point landing.

GERMANS WARN ALLIES TO KEEP HANDS OFF DUCE

Any British Move Against Italy In Mediterranean Would Bring Blow

WAR EXTENSION CITED

Berlin Claims Chamberlain Spreads Strife Covering Norwegian Debacle

BERLIN, May 3—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler is ready to stun the Allies with a mighty counter-blow if British moves in the Mediterranean materialize into war-like action against Premier Mussolini, it was said in authentic Berlin quarters today.

While the high command announced successful mopping up operations in southern Norway, these circles placed great stress on the Reich's preparedness to meet any new Allied belligerency in any quarter whatever.

Exact nature of the Nazi counter-attack is not known, but everything points to the fact that Germany has all her attention focussed on the Mediterranean in the belief Britain plans some surprise move such as the occupation of Crete in an effort to "ham-string" Mussolini.

In this connection, authoritative Wilhelmstrasse quarters, in referring to Chamberlain's announcement that an Allied battle fleet is enroute to Alexandria, bluntly warned the Prime Minister against "extending the war to cover his Norwegian debacle."

The implication was given that Hitler and Mussolini have agreed in full detail on the procedure to be followed if a storm breaks in the South.

Recent Rumors Recalled

The official German news agency DNB today called public attention to recent British rumors that Rumania is about to be invaded by Nazi Germany. The agency declared that the British radio urgently appealed to Rumania not to defer any plea for Allied help, asserting that French and British forces in the Near East are "strong enough to counter" the German threat.

LITTLE BOY WINS AWARDS AS FIRST BABY IN MONTH

The fourth son in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Davis, East Union Street, is Circleville's first in May. The little fellow, named Thomas Lee, was born Friday at 6:55 a. m., at the home. Dr. E. L. Montgomery was the attending physician.

Numerous awards will be made to the family and baby by Circleville merchants. The prizes include:

A frame for the baby's first picture, by the Circleville Paint Co.

A $1 savings account, by the Circleville Savings and Banking Co.

A bottle of his favorite wine to the father, by Stone's Grill.

A carton of six 60-watt lamps, by the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co.

A floral tribute, by Brehmer's Greenhouses.

A pass to the parents during May, by the Cliftona Theatre.

Five gallons of gasoline, by Goeller's service station.

A quart of milk daily for two weeks, by the Blue Ribbon Dairy.

A three month subscription to The Daily Herald, by the Circleville Publishing Co.

THREE CITIES OF OHIO SHOW POPULATION GAINS

DEFIANCE, May 3—The northwestern Ohio towns of Van Wert, Bryan and Wauseon have made sizeable increases in population since the 1930 census, figures released today by the district census bureau in Defiance revealed.

Van Wert which had a population in 1930 of 8,472 jumped to 9,102; Bryan from 4,698 to 5,386, and Wauseon from 2,889 to 2,999.

Dutchman Needs $25,000 To Capture der Fuehrer

CLEVELAND, May 3—Joe Dunkel, the flying Dutchman, was all set today to capture Adolf Hitler and collect the $1,000,000 reward offered by a group of Pittsburgh business men.

All he needs is $25,000 expense money.

Joe, the big idea man who has run the parachute jumps at the National Air Races for some years past, refused to reveal his exact plan for the capture of the German leader, but he wired Samuel Harden Church, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, the man who made the $1,000,000 reward offer public, that he was ready to go.

"Right now on Long Island," Joe declared, "a Lockheed plane is waiting. I have a pilot and a radio man and we can't miss."

"My end of the deal is to send a telegram to Mr. Church and get $25,000 in advance. As soon as he lays it on the line, we're off, and the million bucks is as good as ours."

Joe said the telegram he sent Church read:

"Plans complete for Hitler venture. Need $25,000 to partially defray expense of transportation. Wire instructions and cash. We take off on receipt of expense money."

That, declared Joe, was all he could afford to wire.

Joe has had several spectacular ideas, such as attaching a small automobile to a parachute and then dropping it from a plane, and setting a world parachute jump record from a stratosphere balloon. Other ideas of his have worked.

"For a million bucks," said Joe, "we can't miss."

Census Dispute

IMAGINE the surprise on the face of the Toledo, O., census taker when he queried Mrs. Arthur Cline, housewife, as to the mortgage on the Cline home and was told it was $45,000,000,000. The figure is the U. S. national debt. When the census taker refused to accept the answer, Mrs. Cline called her husband, a lawyer, and he declared the $45,000,000,000 the government owes is a lien or mortgage on his home. Census officials are studying the case.

NAZI INVASION EXAMINER SCANS CITY'S FINANCES FOR RELIEF CASH

LONDON, May 3—The sensational suggestion that Nazi Germany planned or perhaps still plans an armed invasion of Scotland, which would be the first time foreign troops had actually set foot on British soil since 1066, was heard in London today.

Official and military circles flatly declined to discuss reports that British naval dispositions, predicated on the possibility of an invasion of Scotland, made it impossible for Britain effectively to stem the flow of men and supplies from Germany to Norway by sea.

To have done so effectively, these reports said, major units of the British fleet would have been compelled to move into the Skagerrak and the Kattegat, heightening the vulnerability of the Scottish Coast and possibly permitting German troops to land by sea or air in that region, bringing the war for the first time to British soil.

The Norman conquest at the Battle of Hastings in 1066 marked the last time that invaders actually set foot on British land, although a Dutch fleet sailed up the Thames in 1664 and set fire to British ships when Charles II was at war with Holland.

BIG FOUR RAIL, AUTO ACCIDENT FATAL TO FOUR

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., May 3 —A train-auto crash on the Lincoln highway near Forest, 10 miles west of Upper Sandusky, today left four Onagara, Illinois, persons dead, three of them members of one family.

The victims, Earl Fender, 47, his wife, 45; their daughter, Miss Gladys Fender, 25, and Mrs. Martha Mitchell, 65, were killed immediately when their car skidded into the path of the southbound Big Four passenger train in a blinding sleet storm.

According to state highway patrolman, Fender apparently failed to see the train in the snow and rain until almost on the tracks. Skid marks indicated he applied his brakes 37 feet from the crossing, but the auto slid into the guard rail and careened into the train's path. It was carried 1,200 feet down the tracks and then tossed over the embankment.

Engineer Otten of Bellefontaine flattened every wheel on his locomotive in his effort to stop. Two of the bodies were found 1200 feet from the crossing.

VALETTA, Malta, May 3—A complete blackout for the island of Malta, beginning at sunset tonight and continuing indefinitely, was ordered today by British authorities.

WASHINGTON, May 3—President Roosevelt today officially confirmed the fact that the United States is trying through diplomatic means to prevent the spread of the European war to the Mediterranean.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May 3—An Anglo-French naval squadron, fully equipped for battle duty, arrived at Alexandria today.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain announced dispatch of the fleet to Alexandria before the House of Commons yesterday.)

PARIS, May 3—Fresh detachments of one of France's most famous forces—the famed Alpine Chasseurs—have landed at the northern Norwegian port of Narvik and entered a battle now raging on the outskirts of the town. This was revealed today by a French war ministry spokesman who said the Chasseurs have taken 18 prisoners already in hand-to-hand fighting at the edge of the iron ore city.

STOCKHOLM, May 3—Amidst a terrific German aerial bombardment, Allied troops have abandoned Namsos, the Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet reported today.

French troops embarked from Namsos on Wednesday night and the British last night, Aftonbladet said.

The newspaper said that during the embarkation, a heavy bomb struck a British destroyer squarely, killing 30 men and wounding 60 others.

LONDON, May 3—A violent British aerial attack on a Danish air base held by the Germans was announced in an air ministry communique today. The base, situated on the shores of a lake in northern Jutland and used by the Germans for operations in Norway, was "heavily and successfully bombed," the announcement said.

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

Taking swift advantage of British withdrawal from southern Norway, German forces drove up the Oester Valley today against crumbling Norwegian resistance to recapture the strategic town of Roeros, which the Nazis have twice seized and twice abandoned before.

Reports to Stockholm said the Germans probably would reach this objective before the end of the day.

Norwegian forces abandoned defenses at Os, just south of Roeros after eight hours of fighting against stronger German forces. Os itself was reported in flames, with huge clouds of smoke rising over the ruins.

In London, there developed a disposition to await next week's House of Commons debate on the Norwegian campaign before further judgment of the British government's part is expressed.

But it was clear that the House of Commons will hear some outspoken remarks and that the Chamberlain government will have to put up a convincing argument to survive.

London likewise was disposed to discount the possibility of immediate Italian entry into the war on the side of Germany. In addition to concentration of the Allied battlefields in the eastern Mediterranean, precautionary measures by the British and

JACKSON, Miss., May 3—Gov. Paul Johnson of Mississippi barred himself against interviewers today and was reported "resting" in the executive mansion following his brief but rough and tumble fist fight last night with his long time political enemy, Maj. Frederick Sullens, Jackson newspaper editor.

The two men battled in the lobby of the Walthall Hotel in downtown Jackson and before amazed onlookers could separate them both were bleeding.

Statements as to how the fight began were conflicting, but all witnesses were agreed that the chief executive and Major Sullens exchanged a number of hard blows before they were stopped at one time both men were rolling.

ORIENT BOY BITTEN BY DOG; BLACKBURN ACTS

Because Bud Boyd, five-year-old Orient boy, was bitten by a dog owned by Marvin Castle, Friday, Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner, was prompted to again warn dog owners to have their dogs treated for rabies. Dr. Blackburn pointed out that while he did not believe Castle's dog was rabid every precaution should be taken, due to the prevalence of the disease in Pickaway and neighboring counties.

Dr. D. R. Lewis, Grove City, who treated the boy for several lacerations on the cheek, started anti-rabies treatments immediately.

He said the boy was bitten as he attempted to catch the dog. Dr. Blackburn sent the county dog warden to Orient to examine the dog.

JACKSON, Miss., May 3—Gov. Paul Johnson of Mississippi barred himself against interviewers today and was reported "resting" in the executive mansion following his brief but rough and tumble fist fight last night with his long time political enemy, Maj. Frederick Sullens, Jackson newspaper editor.

The two men battled in the lobby of the Walthall Hotel in downtown Jackson and before amazed onlookers could separate them both were bleeding.

Statements as to how the fight began were conflicting, but all witnesses were agreed that the chief executive and Major Sullens exchanged a number of hard blows before they were stopped at one time both men were rolling.

CROP ACREAGE UNDER AAA CUT FOR NEXT YEAR

Percentage Of Land Signed Up Slashed From 78.8 To Only 71.1

ALLOTMENTS ARE CITED Reduction General Through Stock Area, Secretary Declares

A reduction in the number of Pickaway County farmers cooperating in the 1940 AAA soil conservation program was revealed Friday when the County office reported that 71.1 percent of the crop acres in the county would be included in the project during the year. The number of crop acres listed during 1939 was 78.8 percent.

Paul Matthes, secretary of the AAA, declared that the May 1 deadline for filing applications found 1,354 farms signed representing 65.5 percent of the 2,064 farms in the county, or 180,042 acres. The crop acreage total in 1939 was 253,172 covering 1,527 farms.

Matthes said that the amount of money coming into the county for 1940 participation would be somewhat less than the 1939 total when $555,797 was received by Pickaway County.

The secretary declared that the reduction in the number of participants is general throughout the livestock belt. The corn acreage has been cut for 1940, he said, and many farmers, especially smaller ones, have decided not to join in the program. He cited several other counties that had fallen below the 1939 figures.

The next step in the program will be the check of farms to determine compliance with the AAA law. This will start on June 1.

BRICKER, DEWEY CONCEDED GOOD CHANCE TO WIN

Geren, Managing Latter's Campaign In State, Makes Statement

TAFT AIDES CONFIDENT All Of Ohio's Delegates To Attend Convention Tagged For Cincinnati

COLUMBUS, May 3—Either Governor Bricker or Thomas E. Dewey has a better chance to win the Republican presidential nomination than U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, James R. Geren, self-appointed "campaign manager" for Dewey in Ohio said today.

Geren, former Columbus postmaster, has just organized an Ohio Dewey-for-President club without the public blessing of the New York candidate or his managers. "I firmly believe that Dewey would make a better candidate and a better president than Taft or any of the others," Geren said.

"I have talked to a number of influential men in Columbus, and while they are supporting Taft openly, they seem to feel, as I do, that Taft cannot be nominated." Asked what he thought of Bricker as a dark-horse G. O. P. presidential possibility, Geren replied that the chief executive "has a good chance" to be nominated if the convention delegates fail to agree on Taft or Dewey.

"Wishful Thinking" Officials at Republican headquarters in Columbus declined to comment on Geren's statement. However, one party spokesman classified Geren's remarks as "wishful thinking."

(Ohio's 52 delegates to the G. O. P. national convention are pledged to Taft until such time as he sees fit to release them. There is no opposition slate of delegates.)

Taft himself is confident of victory, and his campaign managers discount Dewey's claims of support in a number of eastern states.

Recently in Columbus, the son of the late president, William Howard Taft, even went so far as to predict that there was a possibility he might enter the convention with a majority of delegates pledged to him.

Geren admits that the "club" he organized for Dewey cannot hope to do the New York candidate any good in the convention as far as delegate support is concerned.

"What we aim to do is to build up Dewey publicly in Ohio so that we will have a head start in the event he is nominated," Geren said. "If Taft is nominated, we will just forget the whole thing."

Ashville P.-T.A. Holds Last Meeting Of Year

By S. D. Fridley Ashville, Phone 79

The Ashville-Harrison Parent-Teacher Association held its regular monthly meeting Thursday evening in the high school auditorium with only a fair attendance due to so many other activities going on in and around the village. The session was opened by Rev. Harbaugh in charge of the devotions.

This was followed by the regular business meeting at which all the old officers were reelected for another year with the exception of the secretary, Mr. Fullen, who had served his two years. Miss Kuhn, second grade teacher, was elected as his successor for 1940-41. As has been the custom in the last several years, the association voted to again sponsor a last day of school picnic which will be on Wednesday, May 22. The program for the evening consisted of musical numbers by Edwin Swoyer and some folk dancing by girls of the lower grades physical education classes directed by Miss Conrad. A committee was appointed to contact the members of the village council about placing a light in the park shelter house for roller skating these nights.

Geren said he planned, through the club, to send out Dewey campaign literature to Ohioans. He explained that he was obtaining such literature from Dewey headquarters. He added that membership cards would be given to persons who wished to be identified with his club, but that there would be no dues. He said voluntary contributions would be accepted to pay the cost of mailing campaign literature.

Geren was appointed postmaster of Columbus in 1927 by the late President Calvin Coolidge and served until 1933.

You've probably heard of lots of dogs that are bird retrievers or rabbit retrievers, but did you ever hear of one that was a fish retriever? Well N. T. Weldon's Airedale, Prince, is.

When Mr. Weldon was walking along the river with Prince about a week ago, he saw a fish in the water. He threw a stick at it, and when Prince jumped in the water after the stick the fish moved, so Prince grabbed the fish instead and swam ashore with it. Mr. Weldon was a little disappointed when the fish turned out to be a five-pound carp, but Prince couldn't help that.

'PINOCCHIO', WALT DISNEY'S FAMOUS PICTURE, BOOKED

The first showing in Circleville of Walt Disney's "Pinocchio" is the really big movie event of the year. "Pinocchio" is Walt Disney's challenge to his own work—"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs"—his former feature-length picture which, during two years, has been the peak of achievement in the motion picture world.

That pinnacle is certain to be now topped by "Pinocchio." Never satisfied that he reached a state of perfection, Disney and his staff work tirelessly to develop new methods and devices for improving the artistry and technique of their productions. "Pinocchio," photographed in the new multiplane technicolor, is Walt Disney's latest word on what can be done in the field of art in entertainment.

As with all Walt Disney productions, whether feature or short-length, the music for "Pinocchio" follows the pattern of the light opera. All of the songs further the plot rather than furnish merely a musical interlude.

COUNTY'S SALES TAX RECEIPTS HIGH IN APRIL

Sales tax collection in Pickaway County during the week of April 20 reached a total of $1,439.78, much higher than the $878.71 collection of the same week in 1939. The total so far this year is $22,119.91, compared with $21,223.33 a year ago.

Surrounding counties during the same week collected the following: Ross, $3,266.20; Madison, $1,733.22; Hocking, $907.96; Fairfield, $3,572.35; Fayette, $1,701.34; Franklin, $72,641.75.

In 1849 a Pittsburgh druggist found some rock oil in a nearby brine well and sold it as a remedy for a variety of ills. This was the first commercial use of oil in America. Ten years later the first oil well was drilled and the petroleum industry started.

Conscience Hard at Work

A close-up of "Pinocchio," Walt Disney's new hero for his second full-length feature in multiplane technicolor. The object on his nose is Jiminy Cricket, the second most important character in the new de luxe opus, which deals with the adventures of a puppet who was magically turned into a real boy.

SIX NEW SONGS IN 'PINOCCHIO', GRAND PICTURE

Musical treatment in Walt Disney's second full-length feature production, "Pinocchio," in Technicolor which will have its premiere at the Grand Theatre next Sunday is on a scale as elaborate as that which marked "Snow White" and the Seven Dwarfs.

Six songs are featured, each furthering the plot of the story. The picture opens on little Jiminy Cricket singing a melodious ballad, "When You Wish Upon a Star." As Jiminy completes his song, he offers to give the audience an example of a wish come true, which leads into the actual story of "Pinocchio."

The story concerns a kindly old woodcarver who creates a particularly engaging puppet, which he names Pinocchio. As he finishes painting a face on Pinocchio, he tries out the marionette to see how successful it is. He winds up his music boxes and, to the tinkling tunes, he manipulates Pinocchio's strings so that the latter does a dance, as Geppetto sings a quaint song, "Little Woodenhead." Another song in this sequence is, "Turn on the Old Music Box."

That night, the Blue Fairy gives Pinocchio's life because Geppetto, who always wanted a son, has brought so much happiness to others. Jiminy Cricket, a little vagabond, becomes involved in the situation to the extent that the fairy dubs him Pinocchio's conscience. Jiminy sings the lively song, "Give a Little Whistle," in which he tells Pinocchio that the puppet should always whistle for the Conscience when getting into trouble.

Geppetto sends Pinocchio to school, but a Fox and a Cat, a pair of slick villains, spirit him away to the rollicking tune of "Hi-diddle-de-de, an Actor's Life for Me," selling him to Stromboli, an unscrupulous puppet master. In the puppet show the little marionette sings a spirited song, "Got No Strings."

The picture ends on a joyous note, with Jiminy reprising the song, "When You Wish Upon a Star," for the Blue Fairy has made Pinocchio a real boy because he has proven himself worthy of the honor by almost losing his life to rescue Geppetto from the villainous Monstro the Whale.

MAKING OF NEW FILM BIG TASK FOR DISNEYITES

Few people realize, when they are amused and thrilled by the ingenuity and artistry in a Walt Disney picture, that they are seeing a production more meticulously prepared than the most ambitious of Hollywood super-features.

Take "Pinocchio." This second feature-length picture in multiplane technicolor required 450,000 drawings to achieve its production. But before the enormous staff of inkers and painters put pen and brush to these 450,000 drawings, not only thousands of other sketches and layouts had been made, but various artisans and technicians had created hand made models of all the props in the picture, as well as of all the characters.

Music boxes, clocks, pipes, toys and even a miniature stagecoach and wagons were among the props made in the extensive Disney studio. The music boxes are mounted with figures, one comprising a four-piece Tyrolean orchestra; another with Swiss bell-ringers. Among the clocks are two which enact a drama every hour. One present a drunk falling through the swinging doors of a saloon; the other shows a mother spanking her jam-stealing son. Pipes carved with weird faces and a stagecoach with tiny lamps lighted by means of hidden batteries are among the thousand details which enhance the exquisite atmosphere of the production.

A former puppeteer, now engaged at the Disney studios, made a model of Pinocchio from pine timbers, dressed him in red velvet pants and a white blouse, and showed Disney and the animators how to manipulate the strings that put Pinocchio through convincing puppet antics.

Even the sounds of Monstro lashing the sea into a fury were made by hand. Although the large-est capacity of sound ever put on a film was recorded for sequences when Monstro churns up the sea in a fit of rage with the relatively small production of three by five by four feet. The swish of ordinary water did not give the desired heavy tone. Soapy water was suggested and it did the trick. Wearing swimming trunks the crew attacked the water with stirring rods and similar instruments.

A new species of undersized horses has been discovered in the west. Suitable, we imagine, for tucking into the rumble seat for use in case of an emergency such as a flat tire or no gas.

GARNER, FARLEY TICKET HINTED BY ACTIVITIES

Two Dem Chieftains Talk
Often Over Telephone
Leading To Rumors

STAND UP TO F. D. R.

Postmaster's Early Liking
For Hull May Alter
Situation

WASHINGTON, May 3—The nation's capital is speculating today whether Vice President John N. Garner and Postmaster General James A. Farley have formed an alliance to control the Democratic presidential convention in event President Roosevelt does not seek a third term.

There was speculation whether such an alliance would lead to nomination of a Garner-Farley ticket. There were rumors of such a ticket in the capital last year, but the rumors subsided when Farley told his friends he favored Secretary of State Cordell Hull to lead the ticket.

Speculation over a Garner-Farley ticket was provoked by disclosure that the two Democratic chieftains have consulted frequently by telephone and held two personal conferences this week. One luncheon conference lasted two hours and ended with both Garner and Farley basking in smiles.

One Garner leader—E. B. Germany, chairman of the Garner-for-President Club, predicted the Texan's nomination but added that Mr. Roosevelt would not be a candidate. This declaration carried the intimation that the Garner leaders have some information indicating the President will not accept renomination.

Against No One
Referring to the "Texas compromise," by which third-termers ended their fight against Garner in Texas, Germany said:

"The stipulations in the so-called agreement merely restate the basis of the Garner movement from its inception. It has never been a 'stop Roosevelt movement' either in Texas or elsewhere. We are merely for John Garner and against no one. Certainly we cannot be charged with being against Mr. Roosevelt when he is not a candidate and we do not expect him to be."

Touching on a conference he held with Garner, Germany added:

"All I can say is that we are entirely satisfied with the situation and that the prospects for Mr. Garner's nomination and election are better and brighter today than they have been at any time."

Observers believe Garner and Farley, if they have not formed an alliance, are seeing eye-to-eye on the next convention, despite Farley's earlier indorsement of Hull for the top nomination. That indorsement, given by Farley to

As a good mother knows what is best to feed her children, so God knows what is good for us—what will bring us refreshment for our souls, peace and rest, real happiness.

Things Bring No Joy
Why do we spend money on mere material things? We must eat to live, of course, and we must have clothing and homes in which to live, but much of our money goes for things that really don't make us any happier. We grow tired of them, disillusioned with what earth has to offer us of pleasure. What is wrong? Our souls are hungry for spiritual food, and they can only be satisfied by it. "Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live: and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David," Isaiah says.

And again: "Seek ye Jehovah while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near: "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto Jehovah, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon."

"That is the way to be happy and secure, whether times are good or bad, and even when grief and tragedy come to us. We can repent of our wrong-doing, turn to the good, and rest on the promises of the Lord. "He will abundantly pardon," for He is merciful, and pardon follows mercy.

God's ways and His thoughts are far higher than ours. The prophet reports Jehovah as saying: "For My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts higher than your thoughts."

"For as the rain cometh down and the snow from Heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it to bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: So shall my word be... "For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands."

"Instead of the thorn shall come forth the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."

Haven't you been out in the country, or in some peaceful place where the mountains did indeed seem to "break forth into singing," and the trees to "clap their hands"? In other words, because your soul was happy and peaceful, all nature seemed in tune with your mood. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we always could feel like that? If this peace "that passeth understanding," could be ours because we "cast our burden on the Lord," and we are forgiven of our sins and all is well?

TODAY'S RECIPES

GARNER, FARLEY TICKET HINTED BY ACTIVITIES

Two Dem Chieftains Talk
Often Over Telephone
Leading To Rumors

STAND UP TO F. D. R.

Postmaster's Early Liking
For Hull May Alter
Situation

WASHINGTON, May 3—The nation's capital is speculating today whether Vice President John N. Garner and Postmaster General James A. Farley have formed an alliance to control the Democratic presidential convention in event President Roosevelt does not seek a third term.

There was speculation whether such an alliance would lead to nomination of a Garner-Farley ticket. There were rumors of such a ticket in the capital last year, but the rumors subsided when Farley told his friends he favored Secretary of State Cordell Hull to lead the ticket.

Speculation over a Garner-Farley ticket was provoked by disclosure that the two Democratic chieftains have consulted frequently by telephone and held two personal conferences this week. One luncheon conference lasted two hours and ended with both Garner and Farley basking in smiles.

One Garner leader—E. B. Germany, chairman of the Garner-for-President Club, predicted the Texan's nomination but added that Mr. Roosevelt would not be a candidate. This declaration carried the intimation that the Garner leaders have some information indicating the President will not accept renomination.

Against No One
Referring to the "Texas compromise," by which third-termers ended their fight against Garner in Texas, Germany said:

"The stipulations in the so-called agreement merely restate the basis of the Garner movement from its inception. It has never been a 'stop Roosevelt movement' either in Texas or elsewhere. We are merely for John Garner and against no one. Certainly we cannot be charged with being against Mr. Roosevelt when he is not a candidate and we do not expect him to be."

Touching on a conference he held with Garner, Germany added:

"All I can say is that we are entirely satisfied with the situation and that the prospects for Mr. Garner's nomination and election are better and brighter today than they have been at any time."

Observers believe Garner and Farley, if they have not formed an alliance, are seeing eye-to-eye on the next convention, despite Farley's earlier indorsement of Hull for the top nomination. That indorsement, given by Farley to

THE WHOLE of the 55th chapter of Isaiah should be memorized, as its message is written in such a beautiful language, but more especially for its invitation to leave the things that bring no real happiness and to come unto the Lord, and partake of the big things of life that satisfy.

your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto Me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fastness."

This fare we are offered, of course, is not for food for the body, but spiritual nourishment which leaves no indigestion or unpleasantness, but gives one comfort and joy.

As a good mother knows what is best to feed her children, so God knows what is good for us—what will bring us refreshment for our souls, peace and rest, real happiness.

Things Bring no Joy
Why do we spend money on mere material things? ## COUNTY SEWING WORK PRAISED BY WPA CHIEF

Kelly Reports Articles
Numbering 24,059 Made
During Last Year

SCHOOL LUNCHES LISTED

195 Pupils Being Fed Each
Day At Pickaway And
Wayne Township

Congratulations to Pickaway County commissioners on the efficiency of the county's WPA sewing project were voiced Friday by J. L. Kelly of Columbus, manager of the Central Ohio WPA district, in announcing that this project turned out 54,371 garments and other articles during 4½ years of the federal agency.

An inventory of this work was accompanied by a report on the county's school lunch project for the same period, both being further results of the vast summarization just completed at Washington WPA headquarters.

Pickaway's modern prototype of the old-fashioned sewing circles is similar to most of the latter in that its products go to needy people (families in direct relief), but it differs in the fact that the job of making clothing has been streamlined by the use of the power sewing machines, modern cutting devices, standard patterns of tested value, and a basis of operation something like an assembly line.

And while the garments are distributed by the county to relief families, the women making them are earning a livelihood after having been referred to WPA as in need of work. They are on duty regular hours, their daily stint being so scheduled that each gets in the prescribed 130 hours a month.

24,059 Articles Made
In the county sewing unit at 401 East Main Street, Circleville, 25 women are employed under the supervision of Edna N. Hampton. Last year this unit completed 24,509 articles, and the increasing efficiency is shown by the fact that 15,190 of them were made in the latter six months.

Total output of the project in 4½ years included these garments: 8261 for men, 7800 for women, 8385 for boys, 9244 for girls, and 11,514 for infants. Other articles, totalling 9667, included such things as cot pads, mattresses, comforters, quilts, etc. The kinds of clothing being made depend, in general, upon what are most needed by the relief clients, as evidenced by orders received from the relief office.

The county furnishes working quarters, light, heat and findings (thread, needles, etc.), and buys a considerable part of the materials. In most places materials furnished by the county are purchased locally. The Ohio State Department of Welfare is official sponsor of the state-wide sewing project.

The WPA records show that the school lunch project is operating currently at the Pickaway Township and Wayne Township schools, and has been feeding an average of 195 children daily. Only part of these (at least 10 percent) gets their meals free, the other pupils participating and paying for the opportunity of getting a hot lunch daily instead of packing cold victuals.

Selection Careful
Youngsters designated to receive the free lunch are chosen because of their apparent undernourishment, absence or scantiness of packed lunches, or knowledge of conditions at their homes. Food furnished by the local co-sponsors

Kelly Reports Articles
Numbering 24,059 Made
During Last Year

SCHOOL LUNCHES LISTED

195 Pupils Being Fed Each
Day At Pickaway And
Wayne Township

Congratulations to Pickaway County commissioners on the efficiency of the county's WPA sewing project were voiced Friday by J. L. Kelly of Columbus, manager of the Central Ohio WPA district, in announcing that this project turned out 54,371 garments and other articles during 4½ years of the federal agency.

An inventory of this work was accompanied by a report on the county's school lunch project for the same period, both being further results of the vast summa-rization just completed at Washington WPA headquarters.

Pickaway's modern prototype of the old-fashioned sewing circles is similar to most of the latter in that its products go to needy people (families on direct relief), but it differs in the fact that the job of making clothing has been streamlined by the use of the power sewing machines, modern cutting devices, standard patterns of tested value, and a basis of operation something like an assembly line.

And while the garments are distributed by the county to relief families, the women making them are earning a livelihood after having been referred to WPA as in need of work. They are on duty regular hours, their daily stint being so scheduled that each gets in the prescribed 130 hours a month.

24,059 Articles Made

In the county sewing unit at 401
East Main Street, Circleville, 25 women are employed under the supervision of Edna N. Hampton.
Last year this unit completed 24-509 articles, and the increasing efficiency is shown by the fact that 15,190 of them were made in the latter six months.

Total output of the project in 4½ years included these garments:
$261 for men, 7800 for women,
$385 for boys, 9244 for girls, and 11,514 for infants. Other articles, totaling 9667, included such things as cot pads, mattresses, comforters, quilts, etc. The kinds of clothing being made depend, in general, upon what are most needed by the relief clients, as evidenced by orders received from the relief office.

The county furnishes working quarters, light, heat and findings (thread, needles, etc.), and buys a considerable part of the materials. In most places materials furnished by the county are purchased locally. The Ohio State Department of Welfare is official sponsor of the state-wide sewing project.

The WPA records show that the school lunch project is operating currently at the Pickaway Township and Wayne Township schools, and has been feeding an average of 195 children daily. Only part of these (at least 10 percent) gets their meals free, the other pupils participating and paying for the opportunity of getting a hot lunch daily instead of packing cold victuals.

Selection Careful
Youngsters designated to receive the free lunch are chosen because of their apparent undernourishment, absence or scantiness of packed lunches, or knowledge of conditions at their homes. Food furnished by the local co-sponsors

TO FRANK LYNCH

SIR: Day by day Circleville is moving nearer realization of a dream that you had some few years ago that a playground might eventually be provided for the city's youngsters. Enough money has been gathered to buy more than 13 acres in the north end of the city for playground purposes. City council, of which you are a member, has agreed to accept the playground property as the municipality's, and I feel confident that before long enough additional money will be obtained to properly equip the grounds. When the playground is completed and ready for supervised activities of the city's children I hope that you will sit back in your easy chair and realize that your efforts put the project well on its way. True, you were forced to give up the campaign because of ill health, but not until the success of the project became a definite fact. The fact that Circleville has not had a public playground in years gone by has always been a thorn in the side of the community. Many persons seeking places to settle might have chosen Circleville had there been a suitable place provided for their children to enjoy supervised play. There may be some who will laugh at this statement, but it is a proven fact. Circleville has made great forward strides in the last few years, its industries have grown, its business has increased, its population has jumped. There are few who will deny that the city is a much better place in which to live than it was not so many years ago. The playground, when it is completed, will be another forward step, and thanks to you, Frank Lynch, for your part in making the undertaking a successful one.

TO AMERICAN LEGION

VETERANS: Circleville was very pleased to learn that you had purchased the property of the Circleville Athletic Club with intention of modernizing and remodeling the East Main Street structure, although many who had been interested in the Athletic Club through many years of its history were observed with tears in their eyes when they realized that their Club was passing. The Athletic Club has been a power in Circleville for many years; its name has been heard far and wide in connection with outstanding basketball teams, home talent entertainments, carnivals, etc., and it is too bad that the organization is passing into the discard. Now, it is imperative that the entire community get behind the American Legion to help it make a success of its big undertaking. There are many persons eligible for the Legion who have not considered membership in the organization. Members of Howard Hall post should seek their applications. The home will be the first that the Legion has really known, and I feel certain that the veterans will do all in their power to make it a REAL home, one of which they can well be proud. Townspeople should cooperate in functions that the Legion will attempt from time to time because without this cooperation the veterans will have a difficult time.

TO MISS ELIZABETH RUGGLES

DEAR FRIEND: It isn't often that this column has the opportunity to express its appreciation to a person who lives on the other side of the country for benevolences performed for the benefit of his or her native community. Going back through the years, it is recalled that you have been one of Circleville's finest boosters. Although you haven't claimed Circleville or Pickaway County as your home for a good many years, you have never been called on to help the community which you regard as your own without responding favorably to any requests sent to you. I am sure that I express the sentiments of all when I say: "Thanks".

TO ASHVILLE METHODISTS

CHURCH FOLK: Congratulations go to all of you for the splendid fiftieth anniversary program you conducted last week. The day was a great one from every aspect. But the congratulations of this column go much deeper and much farther back than last Sunday. They go to the handful of persons who gave their time and effort and their ability to get the Asheville Methodist Church started on the path toward success that it enjoys today. The church has become a power in the community which it serves. Its interests and Asheville's interests are one and alike, and persons who gave their all to put the church on the right track 50 years ago are those who deserve praise. I hope that your congregation and your pastor continue to enjoy success for many, many more years.

FOLK: Sunday, Scouts and Scouters of Pickaway County will begin a week's drive to raise $750 for the Boy Scout Sustaining Fund. Part of the funds will be used to pay the salary of a full-time field executive. The field executive is an important figure in the Scouting program. He meets with scoutmasters, helps plan camping programs, arranges district Scout meetings and conferences and plans and directs each Court of Honor. Having a full-time job, he can hardly be expected to work for nothing. Another portion of the money raised will be used to finance the Council Camping Reservation near Delaware. No Scout program is complete without a Scout camp. It is helpful to the Scout both physically and mentally. It gives the Scout an opportunity to study nature, it develops his resourcefulness and tests his ability to get along with boys of his own age. The remaining funds will be used for financing training courses and educational guidance programs for scoutmasters. The scoutmaster receives no salary. His only pay for his services lies in the satisfaction he gets from seeing his Scouts develop into useful citizens. Here is a chance to make a wise investment—in the youth of our community.

Stomach's Reaction to Hot, Cold Drinks

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What effects do cold or hot drinks have upon the stomach, and on the process of digestion?

In the older physiologies it used to be said that the stomach quickly reduced both hot and cold drinks to its own temperature. This did not seem very reasonable—there being no real thermodynamic mechanism in the stomach to change the temperature of its contents any faster than if they were outside the body—and the researches of Drs. Hepburn, Eberhardt and their associates put the matter on a much more understandable basis.

The temperature of the digestive tract rises the further down one goes. The stomach is one degree warmer than the mouth, the large intestine two degrees warmer than the stomach.

Ice water or ice cream causes a marked lowering of stomach temperature. The recovery time is over half an hour. Ice water with a meal delays the emptying time of the stomach from 15 to 30 minutes. When a cold beverage leaks out of the stomach into the intestine, it lowers the intestinal temperature and movements. This may explain some digestive disturbances in individuals who have a rapid emptying rate of the stomach and who partake copiously of cold beverages.

Hot coffee raises the stomach temperature. But hot water bags or electric pads on the outside of the abdomen, even if left on an hour, do not raise the temperature of the inside of the stomach or intestines at all.

Emergency Treatment of a Broken Nose

What is the emergency treatment of broken nose?

The first thought in case of a severe blow on the nose is for hemorrhage. Bleeding from the nose after such an injury may be serious or even fatal.

The nose must be plugged up, preferably with sterile cotton plugs; if not, with any kind of cotton plugs or soft linen. These plugs do no harm. In fact, they do good because they act as splints if the central bone of the nose is broken.

When they are removed, the old clots may be gently washed out with salt solution; if bleeding continues the nose is plugged up with sterile cotton plugs moistened with epinephrine. If there is not much bleeding before swelling has occurred, the surgeon may see fit to attempt to put the broken bones and cartilage back in place. This, however, should not be attempted by anybody except a surgeon.

Cannot Develop Color Sense in a Child

Is it true that color sense can be developed if the training is begun at a sufficiently early period in life?

No. A really color-blind person is color-blind from birth and has become habituated to his visual world long before there is any possibility of training him.

According to Duke-Elder's Text book of Eye Diseases, "A person in whom color vision is defective may go through life quite unconscious of his inferiority and without making any incriminating mistakes, differentiating objects by their size, shape and luminosity, using all the time a complete color vocabulary based on his experience, which teaches him that color terms are applied with great consistency to certain objects and to certain achromatic shades, until circumstances are arranged to eliminate these accessory aids, and he realizes that his sensations differ in some way from the normal."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

K. B.: "Is it not true that there is a vast distinction between insanity and mental ill health? My impression is that a person may be moody, unstable or neurotic without there being any implication of insanity, and that there is no stigma attached to consulting reliable psychiatric advice concerning personality and behavior problems."

Answer—I think you have made a true statement of the case. Certainly psychiatrists deal with personality problems in those who could not be called insane. There is, however, no stigma attached to consulting a psychiatrist about insanity.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

The "Did You Know" column written by Pat J. Kirwin, which appeared in The Daily Herald each Saturday, brought him the award of an engraved plaque from the Ohio State University student government organization in recognition of services to Circleville and Pickaway County.

Miss Hilda Burns, county recorder, arranged to have her office open during the entire day. Previously it had been closed during lunch hour to the inconvenience of attorneys and others engaged in business in the office.

Thirty-five members of the Methodist Episcopal church choir enjoyed a party following rehearsal, the affair being sponsored by the official board of the church in appreciation of the choir's services.

10 YEARS AGO

Sparks from the engine of the 9:25 a. m. passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad set fire to the bridge two miles west of Circleville. Trains were halted during the remainder of the day.

Mrs. Turney Glick, district deputy, was inspecting officer for the annual inspection meeting of the New Holland Temple, Pythian Sisters. Sixty-five were present for the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Smith and daughter returned to their home in Petersburg, W. Va., after a visit with Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Groce of East Union Street.

25 YEARS AGO

The large sheep sheds on the farm of Stanley Beckett, near Commercial Point were struck by lightning and burned to the ground during a thunder and electrical storm. The Beckett home was saved with difficulty because of the heavy gale of wind.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER 1

OLD MR. MERRIFIELD should have known better. Impulsively he ordered this advertisement run once in the HELP WANTED-MALE column of the leading daily paper:

"Mr. Benjamin W. Merrifield wishes to secure the services of a young lady of exceptional talents, for a confidential employment which can be definitely remunerative. Initial qualifications are: (1) That she be unmarried; (2) that she be not more than 23 years of age; (3) that she be unmistakably pretty; (4) that she be a gentlewoman in fact as well as in appearance. Candidates will apply to Mr. Merrifield in person, at his home, The Oaks, in Montrose Manor, at eight o'clock Wednesday morning."

He had just dictated the essence and some of the wording of that want ad to his male secretary, a severe gentleman of Mr. Merrifield's own age, and one even more deeply rooted in tradition.

"This is most extraordinary, Mr. Merrifield," the secretary protested, mildly. "One's curiosity, I must confess, is—"

"One's curiosity be damned!" Benjamin W. Merrifield snapped. "Do as I say and don't try to butt in, Mr. Weems."

"Oh, of course, sir! But—a young woman—a pretty young woman—a pretty young woman—"

Mr. Merrifield turned to him testily, his snowy head shaking a bit. He and his secretary, Jason Weems, had fought thus for almost 50 years.

"I said a pretty young woman, Mr. Weems, and I mean a pretty young woman! I want no other. Is it a sin for a young woman to be pretty? Or for me to want one in my employ?"

"They can be very dangerous, Mr. Merrifield," said Mr. Weems, solemnly. Gray-haired Mr. Weems was an astute man.

Mr. Merrifield chuckled in satisfaction while the other man telephoned the newspaper. He had set the hour at 8 a. m. tomorrow for a reason.

"The smart ones will be up and reading early, Mr. Weems," he explained. "I want no lazy person in my employ."

"Of course not, sir. The youth of today is all too prone to—" Mr. Weems was off then on one of his favorite topics. Together they talked for half an hour. Then at 9 p. m. both old gentlemen went dutifully to bed.

At 5:30 a. m. both were up and at breakfast in their respective dining rooms—Mr. Weems also had lived in this vast brick residence for more than 20 years—and at six they had met again in Mr. Merrifield's main study to begin the day's work. Not that either had to work—Benjamin W. Merrifield was worth more than 10 millions, and Mr. Weems had been comfortable for years—but they agreed that idleness for anybody was a sin. Until they should be interrupted at 8 o'clock—if the advertisement should bring any response—they would be busy tabulating monthly reports of earnings and losses from the two largest Merrifield copper mines.

At 20 minutes to seven, however, Graham, the butler, came into the study carrying an envelope on a tray. Mr. Weems took it carefully, but read its inscription with sudden interest.

"It is marked 'Personal and Urgent,' sir," said he, passing it to his employer. Mr. Merrifield scowled at the interruption, but he opened the envelope and read:

"Dear Mr. Merrifield: 'The type of girl you want in response to your advertisement is, I believe, one who will get to your attention ahead of the crowd. I have every sympathy for the hundred or more girls who are sure to be here at eight, but even now I am at your front door. May I come in?' GAYLE DIXON."

Old Mr. Merrifield's face brightened. He reached to push back a white cowlick—habit of the decades—and grinned somewhat triumphantly at solemn Mr. Weems.

"Graham, that young lady at the door—show her in. And Graham,

"Miss Dixon—I want you to make love to my grandson."

wake up my confounded grandson! You hear me?"

"Yes, sir! At once, sir!"

Mr. Merrifield always shouted a little at his servants and helpers when he was excited. He was long accustomed to being obeyed.

Nor did the old tyrant bother to enlighten his secretary; this was too nice a chance to torture his friend a bit further. He chuckled while Mr. Weems just sat waiting solemnly.

Both men stood up when Gayle Dixon came in.

Their courtesy was entirely involuntary; spontaneous. Miss Dixon was, somehow, just a bit regal, a girl to command instant respect. She was dressed simply but tastefully. She moved with complete poise, and she smiled directly at the two old gentlemen. She did not gush a greeting, nor even speak at all until Mr. Merrifield had appraised her and personally pulled a chair nearer the fireplace blaze for her.

"Won't you—sit down, my dear?" He bowed in courtly manner.

"I knew you would be like this, Mr. Merrifield," she confided all at once. Her voice was lovely to hear. Muted, toneful, intimate but dignified, too. She sat down quietly, admiring the fireplace and its fixtures, the desk and chairs and books, the room in general, in quite frank manner. "Thank you, sir, for letting me come in early. You will want to ask me questions?"

"Why, I—" Benjamin W. Merrifield swallowed. He was not the first man to be momentarily overwhelmed by Gayle Dixon. "Yes, I—well—this is my secretary, Mr. Weems."

"How do you do, Mr. Weems?"

Mr. Merrifield poked at the fire. It served to restore his own poise. When he sat down he could go straight to the matter at hand, as was his custom.

"You wish to work for me. Can you meet all the qualifications?"

"I am unmarried. I am not yet 23. I try hard to be a gentlewoman. As to any beauty, sir—will you not judge that for yourself?"

He smiled at her again, nodding.

"Family?"

"A mother, and some distant cousins, no more. I help mother financially."

"You speak well. You are—exceptionally pretty. Your face shows character. But you haven't asked what sort of work I want and—"

He was interrupted by the opening of the door to his right. They turned to see a young man enter. He was wearing a blue bathrobe, and house slippers that went plop, plop, plop; or maybe it was slop, slop. His hair was tousled, his eyes

"Graham said that you were in a hurry for—"

"Jeremy!" Mr. Merrifield almost roared it. "You show yourself at a great disadvantage! Miss Dixon, may I present my grandson, Jeremy Tucker!"

Acknowledging the introduction, Gayle suppressed a quick smile. The sleepy newcomer was discovering her. His mouth popped open. He colored rather painfully, stammered some sort of apology, ran long, slender fingers through his hair, fumbled with his robe.

"Jeremy is—ah—engaged in what he terms scholastic research, Miss Dixon. Please go and dress, Jeremy." The old gentleman turned back to the fire. "Now, Miss Dixon, about your—"

For the ensuing half hour or so he probed her shrewdly with questions, talked of her past, her present, her ambitions and ideals, became as thoroughly acquainted with her as he could reasonably hope to do in so short a time. The more they talked the more satisfied he appeared. Mr. Weems deduced that much by watching his employer's nodding. For that matter, Mr. Weems' own critical study of her could find nothing tangible on which to base dislike; to him, her only faults seemed to be that she was pretty and young.

They were interrupted again by Graham, the butler, who came in with distress obvious on his somewhat large face.

"I am sorry, sir, but some of them are quite insistent, and—dear me, Mr. Merrifield, there are more than 300 young women crowding the rooms down stairs, and on the lawn are—"

Gayle moved to look out a window and the three men came to look, too. For a long moment they stared. Mr. Merrifield was appalled. He was about to say something when Gayle spoke first.

"I wish there was some way for you to hire all of them!"

They walked slowly back to the fire. Graham stood waiting orders. Mr. Merrifield's old hand trembled a bit, revealing his agitation as he reached again to poke the fire.

"You—you have not even asked me what kind of work I want you to do, my dear," he said. "You impress me a great deal. You say you very much need a job, but—"

"I knew that you would tell me when you were ready, sir. Can you tell me now?"

He turned to look at her appealingly.

"Yes, I do hope you will work for me. You were right, I want a girl who can somehow step ahead of the crowd. I can pay you well. Miss Dixon—I want you to make love to my grandson. To Jeremy, the bookish young man who was just here."

REACTION I get, in mail from the northwest, to Herr Hitler's blitzkrieg in Scandinavia suggests that Adolf hasn't enhanced his popularity in that section of the country by his thrust into the north corner of Europe. I don't think he's an idol anywhere in the United States, but comment from that particular direction is especially adverse to him.

I was brought up in that part of the U. S.—in Iowa, to be specific.

Now, there are a lot of German descendants in that section. Wisconsin, as we know, is full of 'em. They're also plentiful in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska and thereabouts. But the originals of this settlement were largely Germans who had left the Fatherland as liberals—fugitives from the old-style kaiserism, refugees from the German attempted revolution of the 1840's. These times we think of a German as a Hitlerite. In those days we thought of some of them as super-radicals, as too freedom-loving to be safe.

These were folks like Carl Schurz and the warriors who fought "mit Sichel" in the war of secession.

The letters I get from the progeny of these initial Germans don't indicate to me that they're Nazis.

NEVER MIND THE GERMANS

However, never mind the Germans.

The American area I'm talking about was settled by Swedes, Danes and Norwegians. I never heard so much about the Finns. They were classed as Russians then.

In my day there wasn't a well-to-do American family that didn't have a Swedish, Danish or Norwegian hired girl.

They simply saturated our so-called northwest.

A distinguished Norwegian-American of my days was "By God" Ravndal.

He ran a Scandinavian-language newspaper at Sioux Falls, back in the 80's, and was a representative in the South Dakota legislature when I was "covering" one of its earliest sessions as a state—not a territory.

His Scandinavian name was "G. Bie Ravndal."

Nobody knew what "G." stood for or how "Bie" was pronounced. But the name was that "G." meant God. And that "Bie" was pronounced as in "pie." It was assumed that "Bie G." meant "By God"—"By God Ravndal."

"By God" broke into the U. S. diplomatic service and became very prominent. He has grandchildren representing Uncle Sam in the foreign field yet.

SCANDINAVIA VERSUS GERMANY

The question is: Can Scandinavia stand off Germany?

The answer is: No, not without Allied help. Will Allied help do the business? Maybe.

If Allied help succeeds, won't the Allies, in turn, grab the Scandinavians?

Answer—no.

Why not? "Well, remark the Scandinavians' news representatives in Washington (I depend on them for a lot of information): 'We think the Allies are too decent.'"

Some folks may be convinced by this.

The fact is, I think the Allies are regarded with a modicum of skepticism by the neutral governments.

The United States isn't so awful skeptical, being well able to take care of itself. But the little neutrals—they're on the anxious seat. And you hear from 'em back in the country—correspondents who were born here and whose grandparents maybe were born here—but who still hark back to a Scandinavian long-ago.

Public Schools, He was chosen from over fifty applicants.

Edgar Friedman, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Friedman, was the only one of a class of fifty, who successfully passed a civil service examination held by the department of civil engineering of New York City.

His Scandinavian name was "G. Ble Ravndal."

Nobody knew what "G." stood for or how "Ble" was pronounced. But the dope was that "G." meant God. And that "Ble" was pronounced as in "pie." It was assumed that "Ble G." meant "By God"—"By God Ravndal."

"By God" broke into the U. S. diplomatic service and became very prominent. He has grandchildren

representing Uncle Sam in the foreign field yet.

SCANDINAVIA VERSUS GERMANY

The question is: Can Scandinavia stand off Germany?

The answer is: No, not without Allied help. Will Allied help do the business? Maybe.

If Allied help succeeds, won't the Allies, in turn, grab the Scandinavians?

Answer—no.

Why not? "Well, remark the Scandinavians' news representatives in Washington (I depend on them for a lot of information): 'We think the Allies are too decent.'"

Some folks may be convinced by this.

The fact is, I think the Allies are regarded with a modicum of skepticism by the neutral governments.

The United States isn't so awful skeptical, being well able to take care of itself. But the little neutrals—they're on the anxious seat. And you hear from 'em back in the country—correspondents who were born here and whose grandparents may have been born here—but who still hark back to a Scandinavian long-ago.

"Are you sure you wore your shoes when you came here?"

Stomach's Reaction to Hot, Cold Drinks

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What effects do cold or hot drinks have upon the stomach, and on the process of digestion?

In the older physiologies it used to be said that the stomach quickly reduced both hot and cold drinks to its own temperature. This did not seem very reasonable—there being no real thermodynamic mechanism in the stomach to change the temperature of its contents any faster than if they were outside the body—and the researches of Drs. Hepburn, Eberhardt and their associates put the matter on a much more understandable basis.

The temperature of the digestive tract rises the further down one goes. The stomach is one degree warmer than the mouth, the large intestine two degrees warmer than the stomach.

Ice water or ice cream causes a marked lowering of stomach temperature. The recovery time is over half an hour. Ice water with a meal delays the emptying time of the stomach from 15 to 30 minutes. When a cold beverage leaks out of the stomach into the intestine, it lowers the intestinal temperature and movements. This may explain some digestive disturbances in individuals who have a rapid emptying rate of the stomach and who partake copiously of cold beverages.

Hot coffee raises the stomach temperature. But hot water bags or electric pads on the outside of the abdomen, even if left on an hour, do not raise the temperature of the inside of the stomach or intestines at all.

The nose must be plugged up, preferably with sterile cotton plugs; if not, with any kind of cotton plugs or soft linen. These plugs do no harm. In fact, they do good because they act as splints if the central bone of the nose is broken.

When they are removed, the old clots may be gently washed out with salt solution; if bleeding continues the nose is plugged up with sterile cotton plugs moistened with epinephrine. If there is not much bleeding before swelling has occurred, the surgeon may see fit to attempt to put the broken bones and cartilage back in place. This, however, should not be attempted by anybody except a surgeon.

No. A really color-blind person is color-blind from birth and has become habituated to his visual world long before there is any possibility of training him.

According to Duke-Elder's Text book of Eye Diseases, "A person in whom color vision is defective may go through life quite unconscious of his inferiority and without making any incriminating mistakes, differentiating objects by their size, shape and luminosity, using all the time a complete color vocabulary based on his experience, which teaches him that color terms are applied with great consistency to certain objects and to certain chromatic shades, until circumstances are arranged to eliminate these accessory aids, and he realizes that his sensations differ in some way from the normal."

K. B.: "Is it not true that there is a vast distinction between insanity and mental ill health? My impression is that a person may be moody, unstable or neurotic without there being any implication of insanity, and that there is no stigma attached to consulting reliable psychiatric advice concerning personality and behavior problems."

Answer—I think you have made a true statement of the case. Certainly psychiatrists deal with personality problems in those who could not be called insane. There is, however, no stigma attached to consulting a psychiatrist about insanity.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clending has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet costs 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CHAPTER 1

OLD MR. MERRIFIELD should have known better. Impulsively he ordered this advertisement run once in the HELP WANTED-FEMALE column of the leading daily paper:

"Mr. Benjamin W. Merrifield wishes to secure the services of a young lady of exceptional talents, for a confidential employment which can be definitely remunerative. Initial qualifications are: (1) That she be unmarried; (2) that she be not more than 23 years of age; (3) that she be unmistakably pretty; (4) that she be a gentlewoman in fact as well as in appearance. Candidates will apply to Mr. Merrifield in person, at his home, The Oaks, in Montrose Manor, at eight o'clock Wednesday morning."

He had just dictated the essence and some of the wording of that want ad to his male secretary, a severe gentleman of Mr. Merrifield's own age, and one even more deeply rooted in tradition.

"This is most extraordinary, Mr. Merrifield," the secretary protested, mildly. "One's curiosity, I must confess, is—"

"One's curiosity be damned!" Benjamin W. Merrifield snapped. "Do as I say and don't try to butt in, Mr. Weems."

"Oh, of course, sir! But—a young woman—a pretty young woman—a pretty young woman—"

Mr. Merrifield turned to him testily, his snowy head shaking a bit. He and his secretary, Jason Weems, had fought thus for almost 50 years.

"I said a pretty young woman, Mr. Weems, and I mean a pretty young woman! I want no other. Is it a sin for a young woman to be pretty? Or for me to want one in my employ?"

"They can be very dangerous, Mr. Merrifield," said Mr. Weems, solemnly. Gray-haired Mr. Weems was an astute man.

Mr. Merrifield chuckled in satisfaction while the other man telephoned the newspaper. He had set the hour at 8 a. m. tomorrow for a reason.

"The smart ones will be up and reading early, Mr. Weems," he explained. "I want no lazy person in my employ."

"Of course not, sir. The youth of today is all too prone to—" Mr. Weems was off then on one of his favorite topics. Together they talked for half an hour. Then at 9 p. m. both old gentlemen went dutifully to bed.

At 5:30 a. m. both were up and at breakfast in their respective dining rooms—Mr. Weems also had lived in this vast brick residence for more than 20 years—and at six they had met again in Mr. Merrifield's main study to begin the day's work. Not that either had to work—Benjamin W. Merrifield was worth more than 10 millions, and Mr. Weems had been comfortable for years—but they agreed that idleness for anybody was a sin. Until they should be interrupted at 8 o'clock—if the advertisement should bring any response—they would be busy tabulating monthly reports of earnings and losses from the two largest Merrifield copper mines.

At 20 minutes to seven, however, Graham, the butler, came into the study carrying an envelope on a tray. Mr. Weems took it carelessly, but read its inscription with sudden interest.

"It is marked 'Personal and Urgent,' sir," said he, passing it on to his employer. Mr. Merrifield scowled at the interruption, but he opened the envelope and read:

"Dear Mr. Merrifield: 'The type of girl you want in response to your advertisement is, I believe, one who will get to your attention ahead of the crowd. I have every sympathy for the hundred or more girls who are sure to be here at eight, but even now I am at your front door. May I come in?' GAYLE DIXON."

Old Mr. Merrifield's face brightened. He reached to push back a white cowlick—habit of the decades—and grinned somewhat triumphantly at solemn Mr. Weems.

"Graham, that young lady at the door—show her in. And Graham, wake up my confounded grandson! You hear me?"

"Yes, sir! At once, sir!" Mr. Merrifield always shouted a little at his servants and helpers when he was excited. He was long accustomed to being obeyed.

Nor did the old tyrant bother to enlighten his secretary; this was too nice a chance to torture his friend a bit further. He chuckled while Mr. Weems just sat waiting solemnly.

Both men stood up when Gayle Dixon came in.

Their courtesy was entirely involuntary; spontaneous. Miss Dixon was, somehow, just a bit regal, a girl to command instant respect. She was dressed simply but tastefully. She moved with complete poise, and she smiled directly at the two old gentlemen. She did not gush a greeting, nor even speak at all until Mr. Merrifield had praised her and personally pulled a chair nearer the fireplace blaze for her.

"Won't you—sit down, my dear?" He bowed in courtly manner.

"I knew you would be like this, Mr. Merrifield," she confided all at once. Her voice was lovely to hear. Muted, tender, intimate but dignified, too. She sat down quietly, admiring the fireplace and its fixtures, the desk and chairs and books, the room in general, in quite frank manner. "Thank you, sir, for letting me come in early. You will want to ask me questions?"

"Why, I—" Benjamin W. Merrifield swallowed. He was not the first man to be momentarily overwhelmed by Gayle Dixon. "Yes, I—we—this is my secretary, Mr. Weems."

"How do you do, Mr. Weems?" Mr. Merrifield poked at the fire. It served to restore his own poise. When he sat down he could go straight to the matter at hand, as was his custom.

"You wish to work for me. Can you meet all the qualifications?"

"I am unmarried. I am not yet 23. I try hard to be a gentlewoman. As to any beauty, sir—I will not judge that for yourself?"

He smiled at her again, nodding.

"Family?"

"A mother, and some distant cousins, no more. I help mother financially."

"You speak well. You are exceptionally pretty. Your face shows character. But you haven't asked what sort of work I want and—"

He was interrupted by the opening of the door to his right. They turned to see a young man enter. He was wearing a blue bathrobe, and house slippers that went plop, plop, plop; or maybe it was slaps. His hair was tousled, his eyes bleary.

"Miss Dixon—I want you to make love to my grandson."

GERMANS WARN ALLIES TO KEEP HANDS OFF DUCE

Any British Move Against Italy In Mediterranean Would Bring Blow

"We are prepared for all eventualities," authoritative German quarters said.

"We are standing ice-cold and waiting calmly, but we are ready to strike back with all our might wherever England or her Allies strike."

It was indicated that Hitler is leaving the Mediterranean initiative up to Mussolini. The latter, for his own part, will undoubtedly let the British make the first move, and in this connection Berlin was confident that England is "bluffing" and over-emphasizing the Mediterranean situation in an effort to divert public attention from Norway.

"We wish to call attention of the world right now," a German spokesman said, "that if England starts trouble in any presently peaceful areas, we will hold her guilty of deliberately extending the war into new fields."

"Anyone can see that Chamberlain is plotting some new move to camouflage the bitterness of his defeat in Norway."

Bluffing, Berlin Hints

"We are alert and merely challenge Chamberlain with this question: Is it to be Rumania, Yugoslavia or Greece this time, or a mere bluffing pressure on the neutrals to disturb southeastern Europe or set General Maxim Weygand's army on the move in Syria?"

"Nothing, however, can detract from the inglorious British defeat in Norway."

So far as the Mediterranean is concerned, Germany is convinced that Mussolini's fleet is as fully prepared as the British. Spokesmen pointed out that Italian fleet maneuvers have been under way for weeks and that Mussolini's naval guns are fully prepared to defend themselves against hostile action.

ing the German cruiser which had been hit went to the bottom two hours and 20 minutes later.

In his log, the captain recorded the rapidity and efficiency with which the German occupation of Bergen was carried out and the feeble resistance offered by Fort Hellen.

By 2:30 a. m., on April 9, he said, the city and harbor were completely blacked out and two hours later a German warship swung into the harbor flying the signal:

"No vessel allowed to leave harbor."

One hour later came another warship and a destroyer which disembarked a landing party of 30 German soldiers "fully equipped with hand grenades, gas masks, helmets, rifles and extra ammunition."

The log added:

"They scattered into a battle formation and headed at double time toward the heart of the city. At 6 a. m., two torpedo boats, painted white, landed armed soldiers fully equipped."

"At 6:05 a. m., six or eight German aircraft flew over the harbor and city dropping leaflets."

"Heavy fire came from Fort Hellen, one mile north of Skottegrund, at the cruisers who returned the fire and bombarded the fort for about five minutes. The German bombers circled over the fort, dropped several bombs and then all firing ceased."

"At 7 a. m., the German flag was hoisted on the fort."

"At 7:45 a. m., a German naval party boarded ship (the Flying Fish), posted guard at radio room and examined the ship's papers, departing at 8:15 a. m."

Mediterranean Watched Uncertain what the morrow may produce, British authorities left no doubt that the decks are cleared for action in the Mediterranean if need be.

General Sir Ian Hamilton, Britain's hero of Gallipoli, in an outspoken interview with International News Service, denied the Norwegian withdrawal means that Germany has Britain on the run.

He predicted that German soldiers will never invade England, but said he thought the Reich's next step may be to strike down the Danubian Valley. This, he said, might so weaken the German forces on the Western Front that the Allies could crack the Siegfried Line and push into the Reich.

An admiralty communiqué revealed that a total of at least 39 German planes have been destroyed in Norway since April 24.

The German high command announced in its communiqué that pacification of Norway is progressing rapidly.

The port of Aandalsnes has been evacuated by the British and is now in German hands, the war bulletin confirmed. It added that demobilization of Norwegian troops in western Germany is under way.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES, O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: I have just bought some acreage and would like to have some small evergreens to hold back the ground that is near our lake. I wish you would advise me how to go about this so that I could write and have some sent out.

ANSWER: If the evergreens are being used as a reforestation project, they may be obtained through the State Forestry, Wooster, Ohio, for a nominal sum. If, however, they are purely for landscape effect then you will have to purchase them from some of the regular commercial nurseries of which there are a great many here in Ohio.

QUESTION: Could you please give me information on how to treat a Buddleia and when?

ANSWER: Although some years the Buddleia does not die back to the ground, it is usually more satisfactory from the standpoint of size and amount of bloom to cut them back to within a few inches of the ground each spring before the new growth starts. There is one, Buddleia alternifolia, which is absolutely hardy and does not have to be cut back. It does not have as conspicuous a bloom but has very interesting foliage.

QUESTION: Will you kindly let me know what to do about golden glow leaves that turn white, and blooms that are full of brown bugs?

ANSWER: The mildew on the golden glow foliage is easily controlled by dusting or spraying with sulfur. This should be done at the first indication of this mildew appearing. The reddish plant lice on the stems just beneath the blooms are relatively easy to control by spraying or dusting them with some material containing pyrethrum, rotenone, or Black Leaf 40. You must remember to hit every individual aphid in a few weeks, or it will become a great grandmother.

QUESTION: The leaves of my peonies turn brown and some plants do not bloom at all. Can you tell me from this what is wrong with them and what I can do to control them?

ANSWER: Peony blight is usually responsible for the blackish-brown leaves of peonies and the blasting of the buds. When the leaves come up entirely brown, the disease is usually too far along to do anything about it other than destroy the peonies by burning them. If there are only occasional spots on the tips of the leaves, it sometimes helps to cut off the old leaves and turn them before the new growth starts in the spring. Then, mix up some Bordeaux in a watering can and sprinkle the crown of the plant and the ground around it.

QUESTION: I would like to receive your booklets on house plants, garden flowers, and other gardening subjects.

ANSWER: Our various bulletins may be secured only through the county extension agents. Incidentally, we have bulletins

ing on the floor, and at one point in the fight the governor fell over a row of chairs, breaking one.

Mr. Sullens is editor of the Jackson Daily News, which has been critical of Johnson's administration.

Just before the fight, Go. Johnson was conversing with a close friend, Major G. W. Buck of Yazoo City. Suddenly, according to Buck, the governor espied Sullens.

"He (the governor) jumped over me so fast when he saw Major Sullens that I didn't know what was happening until blood started flowing," Buck related. "I guess the governor just boiled over."

State Senator Grady Cook, who was nearby, was one of the first to try to separate the battlers. He said:

"I could see the governor had his head on the floor but I didn't know who the other man was until I pulled him off."

Immediately after the fight, Gov. Johnson retired to the executive mansion, refused to see newspapermen, and announced through an intermediary he had no statement to make.

For Friday, May 3

THE LUNAR and mutual aspects for this day point to fairly active conditions in a business way, but with much important movement in all relations of a group nature. These will be accelerated with high pressure force where corporations, political or fraternal organizations are involved, but they also are beset with questionable or dubious entanglements of a rather treacherous aspect, read as subtle as well as sinister. Some unexpected friendly interest may benefit. With precaution there should be definite progress and profit.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a progressive and productive year, with advancement, enhanced fortunes and growing business and much expansion in several directions, especially in group interest or affiliation. But such fine prospects are beset with trickery and deceit from sinister and underhand alliances. Strange and subtle situations complicate. Seek support from influential friends or other personages in power and authority.

A child born on this day may have great versatility and unusual talent, with much subtlety and imagination. Although genial, gracious, cultured and humane, it may have depths of character difficult to fathom. It may be an idealist or humanitarian, liking social science or uplift movements.

QUESTION: If white and lavender lilacs are planted near each other, will they mix?

ANSWER: Plants themselves never mix. White lilacs always will be white lilacs. However, some forms are more vigorous than others and if planted near each other, the more vigorous may spread and eventually crowd out the other. If, however, lilacs are grown from seed, then you may get something different from the parent.

QUESTION: Do Chinese arbovitae grow tall or are they dwarf? I want a tall arbovitae. I lost a number of cedars by putting cow manure on them. I heard a friend said that the Chinese arbovitae had a broad leaf. Is 4-12-4 good for seedlings?

ANSWER: The Oriental arbovitae comes in both tall and dwarf forms. Although it is a satisfactory plant in the South, it is not particularly satisfactory in Ohio. I believe you would be much more satisfied if for an upright growing evergreen you used the upright Japanese yew, Camellia japonica, or even the Canadian hemlock. Barnyard manure, if it is at least partially rotted, will not injure evergreens provided it is not put in direct contact with the roots. The same thing is true of a 4-12-4 fertilizer. It should either be spaded through the soil before planting or else put on the surface and allowed to work itself in.

WHEN TO LEAD TRUMPS WHENEVER you can be reasonably sure the declarer will have to do a lot of ruffing with his trumps or those in the faced hand, your job is to lead trumps and make him use two of them on a trick instead of one. If it is clear that your side has nearly all of the strength in three suits, you can easily enough deduce that your foe is depending on his distribution, with a blank or singleton in one hand opposite length in the other.

If West had started with a spade, and East upon winning the diamond lead had offered a second spade, South would have had only two trumps left in the dummy for ruffing diamonds. He therefore would have had to lose two tricks in that suit. These, plus the two losers in clubs, would have beaten him.

The hand was a particularly sad one for East and West, since the post-mortem developed that they could have made 5-Hearts, losing only one trick in spades and one in clubs.

'TORSO SLAYER' HUNTED; BODIES OF THREE FOUND

PITTSBURGH, May 3 — Three dismembered bodies—the torso of one bearing a cruelly carved inscription—were found in a suburban railroad scrap yard today, possible victims of Cleveland's long-hunted "torso slayer."

Cut into the chest of the first torso discovered was the one-word inscription: "Nazi." The body was that of a man. The other two victims, police said, were women.

The bodies were found in rapid succession in old boxcars assigned to the scrap heap in the Stowe Township yards of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad.

The headless body of the man was discovered first.

All three bodies had been dismembered with medical precision, Coroner P. J. Heney said following examinations.

"It seems that a butcher knife was used, and by someone who knew how to handle it," said Coroner's physician T. R. Helmbold.

Dismemberment with decapitation was the most striking similarity between today's gruesome find and those in recent years at Cleveland's New Castle, Pa.

Last fall the headless body of a man was found in "murder swamp" near New Castle. Several days later the head was discovered in a gondola car of the P. & L. E. railroad not far away.

"We are standing ice-cold and waiting calmly, but we are ready to strike back with all our might wherever England or her Allies strike."

It was indicated that Hitler is leaving the Mediterranean initiative up to Mussolini. The latter, for his own part, will undoubtedly let the British make the first move, and in this connection Berlin was confident that England is "bluffing" and over-emphasizing the Mediterranean situation in an effort to divert public attention from Norway.

"We wish to call attention of the world right now," a German spokesman said, "that if England starts trouble in any presently peaceful areas, we will hold her guilty of deliberately extending the war into new fields."

"Anyone can see that Chamberlain is plotting some new move to camouflage the bitterness of his defeat in Norway."

Bluffing, Berlin Hints

"We are alert and merely challenge Chamberlain with this question: Is it to be Rumania, Yugoslavia or Greece this time, or a mere bluffing pressure on the neutrals to disturb southeastern Europe or set General Maxim Weygand's army on the move in Syria?"

"Nothing, however, can detract from the glorious British defeat in Norway."

So far as the Mediterranean is concerned, Germany is convinced that Mussolini's fleet is as fully prepared as the British. Spokesmen pointed out that Italian fleet maneuvers have been under way for weeks and that Mussolini's naval guns are fully prepared to defend themselves against hostile action.

AMERICANS SAY SHIP ATTACKED

ing the German cruiser which had been hit went to the bottom two hours and 20 minutes later.

In his log, the captain recorded the rapidity and efficiency with which the German occupation of Bergen was carried out and the feeble resistance offered by Fort Hellen.

By 2:30 a. m., on April 9, he said, the city and harbor were completely blacked out and two hours later a German warship swung into the harbor flying the signal:

"No vessel allowed to leave harbor."

One hour later came another warship and a destroyer which disembarked a landing party of 50 German soldiers "fully equipped with hand grenades, gas masks, helmets, rifles and extra ammunition."

The log added:

"They scattered into a battle formation and headed at double time toward the heart of the city. At 6 a. m., two torpedo boats, painted white, landed armed soldiers fully equipped."

"At 6:05 a. m., six or eight German aircraft flew over the harbor and city dropping leaflets."

"Heavy fire came from Fort Hellen, one mile north of Skottegrund, at the cruisers who returned the fire and bombarded the fort for about five minutes. The German bombers circled over the fort, dropped several bombs and then all firing ceased."

"At 7 a. m., the German flag was hoisted on the fort."

"At 7:45 a. m., a German naval party boarded ship (the Flying Fish), posted guard at radio room and examined the ship's papers, departing at 8:15 a. m."

Mediterranean Watched

Uncertain what the morrow may produce, British authorities left no doubt that the decks are cleared for action in the Mediterranean if need be.

General Sir Ian Hamilton, Britain's hero of Gallipoli, in an outspoken interview with International News Service, denied the Norwegian withdrawal means that Germany has Britain on the run.

He predicted that German soldiers will never invade England, but said he thought the Reich's next step may be to strike down the Danubian Valley. This, he said, might so weaken the German forces on the Western Front that the Allies could crack the Siegfried Line and push into the Reich.

An admiralty communique revealed that a total of at least 39 German planes have been destroyed in Norway since April 24.

The German high command announced in its communique that pacification of Norway is progressing rapidly.

The port of Aandalsnes has been evacuated by the British and is now in German hands, the war bulletin confirmed. It added that demobilization of Norwegian troops in western Germany is under way.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES, O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: I have just bought some acreage and would like to have some small evergreens to hold back the ground that is near our lake. I wish you would advise me how to go about this so that I could write and have some sent out.

ANSWER: If the evergreens are being used as a reforestation project, they may be obtained through the State Forestry, Wooster, Ohio, for a nominal sum. If, however, they are purely for landscape effect then you will have to purchase them from some of the regular commercial nurseries of which there are a great many here in Ohio.

QUESTION: Could you please give me information on how to treat a Buddleia and when?

ANSWER: Although some years the Buddleia does not die back to the ground, it is usually more satisfactory from the standpoint of size and amount of bloom to cut them back to within a few inches of the ground each spring before the new growth starts. There is one, Buddleia alternifolia, which is absolutely hardy, and does not have to be cut back. It does not have as conspicuous a bloom but has very interesting foliage.

QUESTION: Will you kindly let me know what to do about golden glow leaves that turn white, and blooms that are full of brown bugs?

ANSWER: The mildew on the golden glow foliage is easily controlled by dusting or spraying with sulfur. This should be done at the first indication of this mildew appearing. The reddish plant lice on the stems just beneath the blooms are relatively easy to control by spraying or dusting them with some material containing pyrethrum, rotenone, or Black Leaf 40. You must remember to hit every individual aphid in a few weeks, or it will become a great grandmother.

QUESTION: The leaves of my peonies turn brown and some plants do not bloom at all. Can you tell me from this what is wrong with them and what I can do to control them?

ANSWER: Peony blight is usually responsible for the blackish-brown leaves of peonies and the blasting of the buds. When the leaves come up entirely brown, the disease is usually too far along to do anything about it other than destroy the peonies by burning them. If there are only occasional spots on the tips of the leaves, it sometimes helps to cut off the old leaves and turn them before the new growth starts in the spring. Then, mix up some Bordeaux in a watering can and sprinkle the crown of the plant and the ground around it.

QUESTION: I would like to receive your booklets on house plants, garden flowers, and other gardening subjects.

ANSWER: Our various bulletins may be secured only through the county extension agents. Incidentally, we have bulletins available on annual flowers, perennial flowers, flowering bulbs, house plants, garden roses, galios and dahlias, lawns, control of garden insects and diseases, and elm tree insects.

QUESTION: Do you have any material available on the staging, planning, and management of flower shows?

ANSWER: Yes, I have a mimeographed leaflet on this subject which I shall be glad to send to any flower show committee.

QUESTION: I am on the May program of our garden club for a talk on flowering shrubs. If you have any material on this I would appreciate it; if not, would you advise me where to find it?

ANSWER: We have a mimeographed list of flowering shrubs recommended for Ohio which is being sent to you. For additional information may I recommend the Book of Shrubs by Alfred Hottes.

QUESTION: If white and lavender lilacs are planted near each other, will they mix?

ANSWER: Plants themselves never mix. White lilacs always will be white lilacs. However, some forms are more vigorous than others and if planted near each other, the more vigorous may spread and eventually crowd out the other. If, however, lilacs are grown from seed, then you may get something different from the parent.

QUESTION: Do Chinese arbovitae grow tall or are they dwarf? I want a tall arbovitae. I lost a number of cedars by putting cow manure on them. I heard a friend say that the Chinese arbovitae had a broad leaf. Is 4-12-4 good for seedlings?

ANSWER: The Oriental arbovitae comes in both tall and dwarf forms. Although it is a sat-

ing on the floor, and at one point in the fight the governor fell over a row of chairs, breaking one.

Maj. Sullens is editor of the Jackson Daily News, which has been critical of Johnson's administration.

Just before the fight, Gov. Johnson was conversing with a close friend, Major G. W. Buck of Yazoo City. Suddenly, according to Buck, the governor espied Sullens.

"He (the governor) jumped over me so fast when he saw Major Sullens that I didn't know what was happening until blood started flowing," Buck related. "I guess the governor just boiled over."

State Senator Grady Cook, who was nearby, was one of the first to try to separate the battlers. He said:

"I could see the governor had his head on the floor but I didn't know who the other man was until I pulled him off."

Immediately after the fight, Gov. Johnson retired to the executive mansion, refused to see newspapermen, and announced through an intermediary he had no statement to make.

I believe you would be much more satisfied if for an upright growing evergreen you used the upright Japanese yew, Camnart juniper, or even the Canadian hemlock. Barnyard manure, if it is at least partially rotted, will not injure evergreens provided it is not put in direct contact with the roots. The same thing is true of a 4-12-4 fertilizer. It should either be spaded through the soil before planting or else put on the surface and allowed to work itself in.

WHEN TO LEAD TRUMPS

WHENEVER you can be reasonably sure the declarer will have to do a lot of ruffing with his trumps or those in the faced hand, your job is to lead trumps and make him use two of them on a trick instead of one. If it is clear that your side has nearly all of the strength in three suits, you can easily enough deduce that your foe is depending on his distribution, with a blank or singleton in one hand opposite length in the other.

West led his heart 10, and the beans were spilled at the outset. Declarer ruffed, led a diamond to West's Q, and the latter returned the spade 9, all too late. The K won it, then the diamond 4 was ruffed with the spade 8, the heart 3 with the spade 5, the diamond 5 with the spade 10, the heart 5 with the spade 6, the last diamond.

mond, the 10, with the spade Q, the heart K with the spade J, and so the declarer lost only two tricks in clubs, plus the early diamond.

If West had started with a spade, and East upon winning the diamond lead had offered a second spade, South would have had only two trumps left in the dummy for ruffing diamonds. He therefore would have had to lose two tricks in that suit. These, plus the two losers in clubs, would have beaten him.

The hand was a particularly sad one for East and West, since the post-mortem developed that they could have made 5-Hearts, losing only one trick in spades and one in clubs.

'TORSO SLAYER' HUNTED; BODIES OF THREE FOUND

PITTSBURGH, May 3 — Three dismembered bodies—the torso of one bearing a cruelly carved inscription—were found in a suburban railroad scrap yard today, possible victims of Cleveland's long-hunted "torso slayer."

Cut into the chest of the first torso discovered was the one-word inscription: "Nazi." The body was that of a man. The other two victims, police said, were women.

The bodies were found in rapid succession in old boxcars assigned to the scrap heap in the Stowe Township yards of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad.

The headless body of the man was discovered first.

All three bodies had been dismembered with medical precision, Coroner P. J. Heney said following examinations.

"It seems that a butcher knife was used, and by someone who knew how to handle it," said Coroner's physician T. R. Helmbold.

Dismemberment with decapitation was the most striking similarity between today's gruesome find and those in recent years at Cleveland and New Castle, Pa.

Last fall the headless body of a man was found in "murder swamp" near New Castle. Several days later the head was discovered in a gondola car of the P. & L. E. railroad not far away.

Derby May See Smallest Field In Many Years

Bimelech Continues As Favorite Whether Track Is Fast Or Slow; Thoroughbred Proves To Be Outstanding Choice

By Lawton Carver

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3—With mint juleps flowing freely, everybody in holiday mood and in quest of the winner, the 1940 renewal of the Kentucky Derby today, on derby eve, promised one of the smallest fields in the modern history of the classic, with one particular thoroughbred such a standout that the rest of the entry was of virtually no importance. It was Bimelech, the E. R. Bradley candidate, against the field, regardless of what the field may be. Lacking something more prepossessing to string

THOMPSON AND HIGBE TO HURL IN FRIDAY FRAY

CINCINNATI, May 3—Robbed by the weatherman of his chance to join Bucky Walters, currently the only pitcher to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers this season, the Cincinnati Reds' boy wonder, Gene Thompson, was to take to the mound today against the Philadelphia Phillies in his quest for his third win of the season.

Opposing Junior on the mound will be Kirby Higbe, young Phil right-hander.

The rubber game of the three-game Brooklyn series was called because of inclement weather, leaving the Dodgers depart for Pittsburgh in first place, two games ahead of the Reds, who the day before handed them their first defeat. The game was rescheduled for Friday, July 12, originally billed as an off day.

KASEYS WATCHED BY 16,651; RED BIRDS DROPPED

COLUMBUS, May 3—Unless Toledo and Milwaukee can draw more than 16,651 paid admissions when the Brewers open their home season today, the Kansas City Blues cinched the cup awarded annually to the club with the biggest opening day crowd when they came from behind to hand the last-place Columbus Red Birds a 10 to 7 lacing.

Pitcher Ernie Bonham of the defending champions ran his streak of consecutive scoreless innings to 26 before the Red Birds chased him to the showers in the fifth canto with a five-run blast to take a 5 to 2 lead. However the Blues tied it up again in the sixth, shoved over three counters in the seventh and another pair of tallies in the eighth, and coasted to victory despite two Bird runs in the final stanza.

The Blues garnered 13 hits to 11 for the Birds.

Milwaukee and Toledo get their chance to outdraw the Blues' crowd today, as the Rains came to the Brewer park.

Indianapolis ruined Minneapolis' home coming with a 19-hit barrage to take a 13 to 6 decision before 8,000 fans. The Millers were guilty of five miscues as they ended their seven-game win streak. Lin Storti went hitless for the first time this year as the Indians climbed to within one game of the league-leading Millers.

St. Paul's 9,200 fans saw their Saints chalk up a 4 to 1 win behind the effective hurling of Art Herring, who kept 10 hits well scattered. The Saints also garnered ten bingles, but made them count.

Racing Drivers Always Sportsmen

By PHILLIPS J. PECK

INDIANAPOLIS, May 3—Call it camaraderie, esprit de corps, or whatever you like, but there is a subtle bond between 500-mile race drivers that never ceases to be a source of wonder to veteran sports observers.

It transcends the recognized bounds of sportsmanship.

Notre Dame's late Knute Rockne, one of football's immortals, was forever insistent upon fair play, yet "Rock" in his heyday never went so far as to supply the opposing team with a mimeographed set of signals and plays that the Irish would use.

The equivalent of the same thing occurs, however, among the hard-bitten men who gambles for gold and glory on the two and one-half brick oval of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Corporation, scene of the annual Memorial Day speed classic.

Scores of incidents testify to the comradeship existing among the racing grid, but only a few of the "railbirds" around gasoline alley, the Speedway's famed garage section, ever heard of them. The drivers are close-mouthed concerning their exploits.

For instance, there's the story about Kelly Pettilo, smiling little Italian-American from Los Angeles, and Riley Brett, who is considered one of the shrewdest mechanics in the racing business.

On his second attempt to qualify, Pettilo threw a rod through the cylinder of his car. It was the next to the last day of trials and the situation looked hopeless for Pettilo.

Brett witnessed the accident, however, and was the first person to reach Pettilo's garage. There was only one thing to do, Brett said—to "sleeve" the cylinder. They worked all night and the next day Pettilo qualified.

The incident occurred in 1935. In his patched-up mount, the popular West Coast pilot proceeded to win the race with an average speed of 106.240 miles an hour.

In 1937, during qualifying trials, Ralph Hepburn of Los Angeles, smashed into a wall and his car was damaged badly. Hepburn saw little chance of getting into the race, until he was approached by Mike Boyle, Chicago sportsman, who was backing Lou Meyer, only three-time winner of the "500", that year.

"I have the 'sister' car to your machine down in the garage," Boyle told Hepburn. "It's not being used. Take anything you need off it to repair your car."

Hepburn wanted to know what kind of a "deal" they could make. "There's no deal to it," Boyle said. "Just return the parts when you get through with 'em."

Hepburn qualified and entered the race. He finished second to Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis. After 500 miles of driving, however, Hepburn came across the finish line only 2.16 seconds behind the winner in the most thrilling finish the "500" has ever known.

Last year Chet Miller of Detroit came out of the southeast turn into the back stretch a few seconds after Bob Swanson of Los Angeles had cracked up. Swanson was hurled from his machine and lay prone on the track, his clothing in flames.

Miller sized up the situation at a glance and turned his own car into the guard rail to avoid striking a fellow-driver. His first question when he reached the field hospital was: "How's the guy on the track?"

FIELD OF 49 MAY RACE IN INDIANAPOLIS EVENT

INDIANAPOLIS, May 3—Barring withdrawals, the field in the 28th Indianapolis 500-mile auto race on May 30 will number 49 cars—the same as last year—it was announced today.

The field was increased to 49 with the late entries from Donald J. Greene and Rudolph Wehr of Los Angeles. These two entries were received after the deadline of midnight Wednesday, but got under the wire because they had been postmarked earlier than the expiration time.

Eight foreign cars have been entered for this year's "500," including five Maseratis and three Alfa Romeos. Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis, who won last year with a Maserati, will be driving the same car this year. He looms as the favorite and will be after his third win in the classic.

STACY HALL WINS

COLUMBUS, May 3—Stacy Hall, Columbus rubber-matman, today looked forward to a crack at the junior-heavyweight wrestling title belt of Canadian Gil Knutsen. Hall decided Frankie Talar, Chicago roughneck, in an overtime bout before nearly 4,000 fans.

BROWN TO TELL OTHER COACHES OF GRID TEAMS

COLUMBUS, May 3—Paul Brown, who has been coaching unbeaten football teams at Massillon High School for too many years for his opponents to count, was to tell 300 coaches assembled today for the annual Ohio State University Grid Clinic how he whipped his squad into shape this year to hand Kent State University an astonishing 47 to 0 wallop in a six-period practice tilt.

The Ohio State coaching staff, headed by Coach Francis Schmidt, will discuss difficult phases of the gridiron sport, but it was Brown who took the top spot in the discussions with his remarkable feat.

Motion pictures of two of the most thrilling 1939 Ohio State games—the last-quarter win over Minnesota and the defeat by Cornell—will soon be shown and analyzed. Tomorrow the assembled coaches will hear an address by Governor Bricker before witnessing a preview of the 1940 Buck Squad, which will meet the reserves in a regulation clash.

RICH'S SORE ARM PUTS HIM BACK IN MINORS

BOSTON, May 3—Woody Rich, brilliant rookie pitcher for the Red Sox last spring, today was back in Louisville of the American Association because of arm trouble. He was released subject to 24-hour recall by the Sox. The young right-hander came up with five well-pitched games last year in his first start in the major leagues. A sore arm developed on a cold, rainy day, and Rich has never been able to recover the pose he had at the beginning.

Numerous Records To Go By Boards; California Star Starts It

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK, May 3—Many years ago the writer drew a round of Bronx cheers for suggesting in a story that a 9-second century, a 4-minute mile, a 7-foot high jump, a 15-foot pole vault and a 60-foot shot put were not only possibilities but probabilities.

For years it appeared likely that I might be left out on a limb on all counts but the athletes have been rallying 'round in great style in the last year and only recently Cornelius Warmerdam, the California high school teacher, made part of my forecast come true with a 15-foot pole vault.

The century mark has been lowered to 9.4; Glen Cunningham ran a paced mile in 4:04.4; the high jump ceiling has been raised to 6' 9 3/4" and Al Boziz, the Georgetown giant, looks like a good bet to get that 60' shot put in the next few years.

That 15-foot vault was a marvelous performance but it was no better than the new world record created by the Stanford University four—Charlie Shaw, Ernie Clark, Craig Williamson and Clyde Jeffrey—who returned 3:10.5 for the mile relay.

Those California athletes, really are phenomenal. Here are four fellows from one university who averaged 47.6 for their quarters, which isn't far off the world record.

The records hung up by the sprinters, hurdlers and middle distance men during the indoor season indicate that no record now on the books is safe from the assault of the current crop of athletes.

Before the outdoor season ends we shall see new marks hung up for several events and it's a pity that these boys won't have a chance to strut their stuff in the Olympics this year.

Their performances indicate that they would have swept the field had the Olympics been held at Helsinki as scheduled. As it is, we shall have keener competition and larger fields for the track meets in our own country.

NATIE MANN AND BUDDY BAER COMPETE TONIGHT

NEW YORK, May 3—Another of those Mutt and Jeff affairs is scheduled for Madison Square Garden tonight when Natie Mann, New Haven's 190-pound stripln, attempts to bowl over California's 243-pound Buddy Baer.

Mann is a 6 to 5 choice in what little betting there is. The boys along Broadway seem to be afraid of this one, and the consensus seems to be that it is merely a question of which fighter quits first.

Some believe Baer will decide to "retire" long before the 12-round limit, just as he did against Gunnar Barlund. On the other hand others, with a picture of Mann gracefully being counted out on one knee before Tony Galento, think Mann will be the first to fold.

Derby May See Smallest Field In Many Years

Bimelech Continues As Favorite Whether Track Is Fast Or Slow; Thoroughbred Proves To Be Outstanding Choice

By Lawton Carver

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3—With mint juleps flowing freely, everybody in holiday mood and in quest of the winner, the 1940 renewal of the Kentucky Derby today, on derby eve, promised one of the smallest fields in the modern history of the classic, with one particular thoroughbred such a standout that the rest of the entry was of virtually no importance. It was Bimelech, the E. R. Bradley candidate, against the field, regardless of what the field may be. Lacking something more prepossessing to string along with, you bet Bradley anyhow in this race. It just so happens this time that when you bet Bradley you probably bet the shortest priced favorite ever to go to the post.

As of early today, pending the close of entries, the expected starters in the race tomorrow are: Bimelech, followed by Pictor, Mioland, Dit, Sirocco, Gallahadien, Roman, and possibly Incolassie, a filly which may attempt to become the second filly ever to win the derby. The first was Regret in 1915.

The dope of Bimelech still was (1) he is owned by Bradley and (2) he is a Black Tony colt and therefore one than can run in the mud or a distance. Last year Col. Bradley offered to pit this contender against any horse in the nation, weight for age, and that must give some kind of an idea of how he can go, aside from the fact that he has won eight straight without a defeat.

KASEYS WATCHED BY 16,651; RED BIRDS DROPPED

COLUMBUS, May 3—Unless Toledo and Milwaukee can draw more than 16,651 paid admissions when the Brewers open their home season today, the Kansas City Blues cinched the cup awarded annually to the club with the biggest opening day crowd when they came from behind to hand the last-place Columbus Red Birds a 10 to 7 lacing.

Pitcher Ernie Bonham of the defending champions ran his streak of consecutive scoreless innings to 26 before the Red Birds chased him to the showers in the fifth canto with a five-run blast to take a 5 to 2 lead. However the Blues tied it up again in the sixth, shoved over three counters in the seventh and another pair of tallies in the eighth, and coasted to victory despite two Bird runs in the final stanza.

The Blues garnered 13 hits to 11 for the Birds.

Milwaukee and Toledo get their chance to outdraw the Blues' crowd today, as the Rains came to the Brewer park.

Indianapolis ruined Minneapolis' home coming with a 19-hit barrage to take a 13 to 6 decision before 8,000 fans. The Millers were guilty of five miscues as they ended their seven-game win streak. Lin Storti went hitless for the first time this year as the Indians climbed to within one game of the league-leading Millers.

St. Paul's 9,200 fans saw their Saints chalk up a 4 to 1 win behind the effective hurling of Art Herring, who kept 10 hits well scattered. The Saints also garnered ten bingles, but made them count.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3—A record Louisville gate was predicted for the 15-round battle tonight between Sammy Angott, home town boy, and Davey Day of Chicago for the NBA lightweight title.

Both fighters were tuned perfectly for the fight, which will be their third meeting. Each holds a decision over the other in ten round affairs. Tonight's bout will be their first over the longer route.

Former Heavyweight Champion Jack Dempsey will be sole judge of tonight's battle, as well as referee. A ringside spectator will be Gene Tunney, while in Day's corner as a second will be Barney Ross.

Promoters predicted a gate of $30,000, which would be $9,000 over Louisville's biggest fight gate to date. A capacity crowd at the armory, scene of the mix, would bring $34,000 into the till.

Racing Drivers Always Sportsmen

By PHILLIPS J. PECK

INDIANAPOLIS, May 3—Call it camaraderie, esprit de corps, or whatever you like, but there is a subtle bond between 500-mile race drivers that never ceases to be a source of wonder to veteran sports observers.

It transcends the recognized bounds of sportsmanship. Notre Dame's late Knute Rockne, one of football's immortals, was forever insistent upon fair play, yet "Rock" in his heyday never went so far as to supply the opposing team with a mimeographed set of signals and plays that the Irish would use.

The equivalent of the same thing occurs, however, among the hard-bitten men who gamble for gold and glory on the two and one-half brick oval of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Corporation, scene of the annual Memorial Day speed classic.

Scores of incidents testify to the comradeship existing among the racing gentry, but only a few of the "railbirds" around gasoline alley, the Speedway's famed garage section, ever heard of them. The drivers are close-mouthed concerning their exploits.

For instance, there's the story about Kelly Pettito, smiling little Italian-American from Los Angeles, and Riley Brett, who is considered one of the shrewdest mechanics in the racing business.

On his second attempt to qualify, Pettito threw a rod through the cylinder of his car. It was the next to the last day of trials and the situation looked hopeless for Pettito.

Brett witnessed the accident, however, and was the first person to reach Pettito's garage. There was only one thing to do, Brett said—to "sleeve" the cylinder. They worked all night and the next day Pettito qualified.

The incident occurred in 1935. In his patched-up mount, the popular West Coast pilot proceeded to win the race with an average speed of 106.24 miles an hour.

Hepburn qualified and entered the race. He finished second to Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis. After 500 miles of driving, however, Hepburn came across the finish line only 2.16 seconds behind the winner in the most thrilling finish the "500" has ever known.

Last year Chet Miller of Detroit came out of the southeast turn into the back stretch a few seconds after Bob Swanson of Los Angeles had cracked up. Swanson was hurled from his machine and lay prone on the track, his clothing in flames.

Legal Notice

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF PICKAWAY COUNTY, OHIO

No. 18433

NOTICE

Helen Noggle, William Lewis Noggle, a minor, Mary Alice Noggle, a minor, and Helen Noggle as the mother and natural guardian of William Lewis Noggle and Mary Alice Noggle, each of whom resides at 859 Loma Drive, Hermosa Beach, California, will take notice that on the 23rd day of April, 1940, Maud Ferguson filed her petition in the Common Pleas Court of Pickaway County, Ohio in case No. 18433 against the above named parties praying for partition of real estate, judgment on a promissory note in the sum of $233.34, with interest at the rate of 6% per annum from March 15, 1929. Said parties are required to answer on or before the first day of June, 1940.

TOM A. RENICK,

(April 5, 12, 19, 26; May 3, 10)

Grace R. Cook, a minor, residing at 229 South Jefferson Street, Hastings, Michigan, and Verlin E. Robinson, her father and natural guardian, residing at 229 South Jefferson Street, Hastings, Michigan, will take notice that on the 11th day of April, 1940 the plaintiff, Marvin Cook, a minor, by A. It Was Like This—By Hervey Allen. Two stories of World War I in which the author of Toward the Flame gives us tales about a U. S. Lieutenant and a corporal in "Report To Major Roberts" and "Blood Lust".

Even today dwellers of Hammerfest, Norway, northernmost town in Europe, celebrate with feast and happiness the return of the sun to that Arctic city after the six-month night.

Library Notes

NEW ADDITIONS TO THE LIBRARY

The Kid From Tompkinsville—By J. R. Tunis. This is a baseball story for high school boys or adults who are baseball fans. Roy Tucker is the rookie who makes good on a major league team after his usual American boy training in sand lot baseball. Here, measured by one boy's tense experience, are shown the factors that make baseball the best beloved spectacle of the American public—the coordination of mind and muscle, the endurance and courage that carry a man through the long grind, the hopes, the disappointments. The reader can look at baseball from the inside and watch a boy become a man, moulded by the severe tests of a game that demands not only skill but what the baseball players call "heart".

Robert Louis Stevenson—By E. O. Grover. Although the writings of R. L. Stevenson are universally well known and appreciated, the adventurous life of this man, whom the native Samoans called TUSITALA, Teller of Tales, is surprisingly unknown to young people. In this interesting biography, Miss Grover writes primarily for older boys and girls.

Miss Munday—By Sophia Engstrand. Winner of the Dial Press $1,000.00 award, this is the appealing story of a young high school teacher. She is young, attractive, and happy in her choice of a career, until she discovered that River Port was a typical mid-western town—self-sufficient, smug, and overrun with gossip and intrigue which permeated even its school system. Then she met Adam LaFord—but that is the story.

No Place Like Home—By the Abbe Children (Abbe, Patience, Richard & John). As an uncensored report of conditions in Europe, these further adventures of the Abbe children are more revealing than any government report ever written and much funnier. A charming travel book you'll enjoy.

Oh, Promised Land—By James Street. The story of Big Sam Dabney, legendary hero of the Georgia border who helped establish the state of Mississippi in 1817 and make a name for himself in American history by riding 950 miles in seven days with a message for General Jackson at New Orleans. It is a story filled with suspense and action during the wild outlaw years between 1794 and 1814.

Modern Miracle Men—By J. D. Ratcliff. What scientists are doing today in agriculture and medical research to make a better life for tomorrow is recounted here with an accuracy and precision as readable and exciting as any well told novel.

Wrestling—By H. A. Stone. A book on modern wrestling giving rules, holds, and techniques that are valuable for both coaches and participants. The author is an Assistant Professor of Physical Education at the University of California. He takes up intercollegiate and olympic wrestling in the course of the book.

American Armies and Battlefields in Europe—By The American Battle Monuments Commission. A guide, reference book, and technical history of the European war, 1914-18, is this detailed study of the American Expeditionary Forces. Many details concerning the organization and operation of the A. E. F. are given along with descriptions of all military operations, especially the campaigns in the Regions of the Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne, Champagne-Marne. Maps accompany the text. A part of this book is designed for travelers seeking information about memorials erected in Europe and knowledge for use on tours throughout the area.

Union Now — By C. K. Streit. A shorter version of the authors proposed plan for an international federation of democracies. The book gives a clear idea of the plan for a living constitution for the world's democracies: To unite the United States and the democracies of Europe under one federal government.

Library Notes

NEW ADDITIONS TO THE LIBRARY

The Kid From Tompkinsville—
By J. R. Tunis. This is a baseball story for high school boys or adults who are baseball fans. Roy Tucker is the rookie who makes good on a major league team after his usual American boy training in sand lot baseball. Here, measured by one boy's tense experience, are shown the factors that make baseball the best beloved spectacle of the American public—the coordination of mind and muscle, the endurance and courage that carry a man through the long grind, the hopes, the disappointments. The reader can look at baseball from the inside and watch a boy become a man, moulded by the severe tests of a game that demands not only skill but what the baseball players call "heart".

Robert Louis Stevenson—By E. O. Grover. Although the writings of R. L. Stevenson are universally well known and appreciated, the adventurous life of this man, whom the native Samoans called TUSTALA, Teller of Tales, is surprisingly unknown to young people. In this interesting biography, Miss Grover writes primarily for older boys and girls.

Miss Munday—By Sophia Eng-
strand. Winner of the Dial Press $1,000.00 award, this is the appealing story of a young high school teacher. She is young, attractive, and happy in her choice of a career
until she discovered that River Port was a typical mid-western town—self-sufficient, smug, and overrun with gossip and intrigue which permeated even its school system. Then she met Adam La-
Ford—but that is the story.

No Place Like Home—By the Abbe Children (Abbe, Patience, Richard & John). As an uncensored report of conditions in Europe, these further adventures of the Abbe children are more revealing than any government report ever written and much funnier. A charming travel book you'll enjoy.

Oh, Promised Land—By James Street. The story of Big Sam
Dabney, legendary hero of the Georgia border who helped establish the state of Mississippi in 1817 and make a name for himself in American history by riding 950 miles in seven days with a message for General Jackson at New Orleans. It is a story filled with suspense and action during the wild outlaw years between 1794 and 1814.

Modern Miracle Men—By J. D.
Ratcliff. What scientists are doing today in agriculture and medical research to make a better life for tomorrow is recounted here with an accuracy and precision as readable and exciting as any well told novel.

Wrestling—By H. A. Stone. A book on modern wrestling giving rules, holds, and techniques that are valuable for both coaches and participants. The author is an Assistant Professor of Physical Education at the University of California. He takes up intercollegiate and olympic wrestling in the course of the book.

American Armies and Battlefields in Europe—By The American Battle Monuments Commission. A guide, reference book, and technical history of the European war, 1914-18, is this detailed study of the American Expeditionary Forces. Many details concerning the organization and operation of the A. E. F. are given along with descriptions of all military operations, especially the campaigns in the Regions of the Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne, Champagne-Marne. Maps accompany the text. A part of this book is designed for travelers seeking information about memorials erected in Europe and knowledge for use on tours throughout the area.

Union Now — By C. K. Streit.
A shorter version of the authors proposed plan for an international federation of democracies. The book gives a clear idea of the plan for a living constitution for the world's democracies: To unite the United States and the democracies of Europe under one federal government.

Our Arabian Nights—By Ruth & Helen Hoffman. The Hoffman twins for the last few years have lived in Iraq where Ruth's husband is employed by the Iraq government. They are among the few western women to live in an oriental harem—probably the first time for twins to do it. In this delightful book we visit the harem, explore Baghdad from top to bottom, and help collect an unusual pet menagerie which included a wild boar, storks, and peacocks, all of which are depicted in clever line drawings.

It Was Like This—By Hervey
Allen. Two stories of World War I in which the author of Toward the Flame gives us tales about a U. S. Lieutenant and a corporal in "Report To Major Roberts" and
"Blood Lust".

Even today dwellers of Ham-merfest, Norway, northernmost town in Europe, celebrate with feast and happiness the return of the sun to that Arctic city after the six-month night.

Waning Winter To Retreat After Hurling Snow Over Much Of State; Circleville Temperature At 37 During Night

Spring, which was forced into a two-day retreat by the blitzkrieg of a waning winter, was scheduled to attempt an advance again Friday on the Central Ohio front.

However, the frosty forces, which stubbornly refused to admit defeat during the two-months war, entrenched themselves in the mid-thirties Friday morning and bitterly contested every degree of the thermometer's advance.

Thursday winter more than held its own, with the first May snow barrage seen in central Ohio in 11 years. The snow came from the Northwest, supported by an 18-mile wind.

FOSTER, TSCHAIKOWSKY COMMEMORATED

Two musical titans of unlike origin, Stephen Foster and Tschai-kowsky, who both registered powerful impacts on the public's musical susceptibilities, will be commemorated on the "Tune-Up Time" program by Maestro Andre Kostelanetz and Tony Martin, the singing master of ceremonies, over the Columbia Broadcasting System Monday, at 7 p. m.

Stephen Foster, composer of well-loved songs from the good old days before America grew out of homespun, will receive the maestro's complimentary attention with an arrangement of six favorite Foster airs. These are "Oh, Susanna," "Swanee River," "I Dream of Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair," "Camptown Races," "My Old Kentucky Home," and "Louisiana Belle."

The Stephen Foster portfolio was timed by the conductor to coincide with the release of the Stephen Foster postage stamp, prepared for public sale the first time on May 3 at Foster's old home at Bardonia, Kentucky.

The other anniversary receiving commemoration on this May 6 program of "Tune-Up Time" is that of Peter Illich Tschai-kowsky, the vital Russian composer of powerful orchestral effects. A streamlined version of Tschai-kowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture will be presented by Kostelanetz and his 45-piece symphony orchestra, in honor of the 100th anniversary of Tschai-kowsky's birth in Russia on May 7, 1840.

IN the throes of a "horrible nightmare" in which she dreamed again of the accident several years ago in which her father was killed, Mrs. Lina Bittlinger, 20, above, of Memphis, Tenn., is charged with shooting her husband, Harry, 22, in the head. She denied any knowledge of the shooting or that there was any rift in her love. Police booked her on a charge of attempted murder.

POLICE HEAR CONFLICTING REPORTS OF MINOR MISHAP

Paul Staley, 352 East Franklin Street, told police Thursday that he was struck by the automobile of S. K. Hays, 392 Maxwell Road, Toledo, as he was riding his bicycle north through the alley beside the Pickaway Motor Sales. Staley told police that Hays failed to stop after knocking him from his bicycle, which he said was badly damaged. Young Staley was not injured.

Shortly after the accident Hays, who is staying at the American Hotel, came to the police station where he told Patrolman Carl Radcliff that Staley had ridden his bicycle into the side of his car. Hays said that he had stopped and asked Staley if he were hurt before he had driven away.

$500 SETTLEMENT MADE AS RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Betty Jane Lutz, a minor, daughter of Lloyd Lutz who lives southeast of Circleville, has received a $500 settlement in the Pickaway County Probate Court for personal injuries she received when she was struck June 7, 1939 by an automobile driven by John Penn of Pickaway Township.

And by Quality... We mean quality—we are not in competition with the lower prices. We can only say that our Dry Cleaning and our Service is superior and full worth the price. Here are five of the reasons why:

1. The extreme care in which your garments are handled.
2. The extras which are done without extra charge. Sewing up seams—tacking linings—tacking hems—minor repairs.
3. All buttons replaced.
4. The hand pressing of all dresses on the wrong side to prevent shine.
5. The fresh, odorless conditions in which your garments are returned to you.

Waning Winter To Retreat After Hurling Snow Over Much Of State; Circleville Temperature At 37 During Night

Spring, which was forced into a two-day retreat by the blitzkrieg of a waning winter, was scheduled to attempt an advance again Friday on the Central Ohio front.

However, the frosty forces, which stubbornly refused to admit defeat during the two-month war, entrenched themselves in the mid-thirties Friday morning and bitterly contested every degree of the thermometer's advance.

FOSTER, TSCAIKOWSKY COMMEMORATED

Two musical titans of unlike origin, Stephen Foster and Tchaikowsky, who both registered powerful impacts on the public's musical susceptibilities, will be commemorated on the "Tune-Up Time" program by Maestro Andre Kostelanetz and Tony Martin, the singing master of ceremonies, over the Columbia Broadcasting System Monday, at 7 p. m.

Stephen Foster, composer of well-loved songs from the good old days before America grew out of homespun, will receive the maestro's complimentary attention with an arrangement of six favorite Foster airs. These are "Oh, Susanna," "Swanee River," "I Dream of Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair," "Camptown Races," "My Old Kentucky Home," and "Louisiana Belle."

The Stephen Foster portfolio was timed by the conductor to coincide with the release of the Stephen Foster postage stamp, prepared for public sale the first time on May 3 at Foster's old home at Bardonia, Kentucky.

The other anniversary receiving commemoration on this May 6 program of "Tune-Up Time" is that of Peter Illich Tchaikowsky, the vital Russian composer of powerful orchestral effects. A streamlined version of Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" Overture will be presented by Kostelanetz and his 45-piece symphony orchestra, in honor of the 100th anniversary of Tchaikowsky's birth in Russia on May 7, 1840.
